

Beach Safer Now, Lifeguard Reports

This year, there is a relatively low rescue rate at Torrance beach with only 70 rescues since January as compared to 270 last year at this time, it was reported by lifeguard Dick Garrett.

Garrett reported that there have been only 10 rescues since school let out. He added that this is due partly to the calm summer with hardly any rip-tides, and the weather, which has not offered many sunny days.

The lifeguard mentioned that there has been a problem, however, with the surfboarders in the area. Sometimes, he said, the water is so packed with the surfers that it endangers the swimmers.

He added that the county has regulated the surfing, making it legal only before noon and after 4 p.m.

Garrett continued that even with this regulation, during the hours allowing surfing, there are from 100 to 150 surfers in the water.

This, he stated, confines the swimmer to a small area in front of the lifeguard stations, barely giving them room to swim.

Average Earnings Rise to All-Time High

Average hourly earnings of factory workers rose to a new high in the Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan Area in May, but the purchasing power of their take-home pay was below a year ago, John F. Henning, California Director of Industrial Relations, announced today. Factory earnings reached an all-time record of $2.57 per hour in May. Increases in wage rates during the past 12 months brought earnings 8 cents per hour, or 3 percent, above May, 1959.

Governor Begins Plan to Combat Narcotics

Governor Edmund G. Brown's Special Crime Commission on Narcotics, part of his seven-point program to combat the narcotics evil in California, is off to a running start.

The commission met in Palo Alto June 29 under the chairmanship of Harry Kimball, a former FBI executive in San Francisco. It was the fifth meeting, even though financing for its comprehensive study was not available until July 1.
