Survey Reveals Aims, Attitude of Teenage Girl

What is the teen girl like in 1960?

She has a weekly income of $9.53, gets up at 7:34 a.m., is ready for bed at 10:49 p.m., makes her own breakfast and lunch on an average day, spends $300 a year on her wardrobe, listens to the radio 2 hours a day, can cook everything from spaghetti to chocolate cake, goes to church on Sunday, works after school at jobs from babysitting to clerking, confides in friends, not father—and worries about a Saturday night date.

These facts about America's 9,750,000 teen-age girls are revealed in a survey published by Seventeen Magazine.

The monograph depicts the teen-age girl next door as a busy, responsible, moneyed young adult who is simultaneously on the move with school, community activities, dates, homework and household chores; on the job part-time and full-time; and on the look-out for everything new from merchandise to men.

Through the study of a picture emerges of a 5'3.2" girl, weighing 114.7 pounds, who lives in a private house and comes from a family that is richer than the average American family. In the 6,000,000 families with teen daughters, father is at or near his earning peak (25% in executive, managerial, or proprietary occupations; 14% are professional men) and mother is free to take on full or part-time work. 77% of the teens live in private houses; 83.3% report that their parents are living together (For 6.3% one parent is deceased).

Sociological information show that 87% of America's teen girls have received sex education, with friends having the edge over parents as the source of instruction. With today's teens the classical Oedipus complex seems to be disappearing—only 1.4% feel closets to their fathers; instead, 49.8% name their girl friends as confidantes and advisors. A surprise statistic in the survey is that only 1 out 3 teen girls who date goes steady.

LESS THAN GOLD

Certain gold mines in South America were abandoned during the Eighteenth Century because a large quantity of platinum was found to be mixed with the gold. Platinum in those times was worth considerably less than gold.
