GAS GALORE—Melvin W. Garrett, 22521 S. Vermont Ave., and family are all smiles as Plymouth dealer Von Moffett, 1600 Cabrillo in Torrance, passes out 500 gallons of gas. The Garretts came in second in why it is necessary to vote contest, sponsored by Plymouth dealers.

Employment Office Observes Anniversary

(Continued from page one) geles area, the real community wealth comes, of course, from the people placed in jobs by the State Employment Service," Love said. He and his staff expect a busy decade ahead when hundreds of thousands of "World War II babies" will enter the labor force.

"Every new industry, every plant shutdown, every seasonal layoff or job recall, affects the community and the employment service operations alike," Love said.

In this anniversary month of September, marking 25 years of unemployment insurance, the Torrance office will take about 2000 new job applications, place workers on some 800 farm or nonfarm jobs, will take 1800 initial claims for unemployment insurance, and counsel some 200 workers.

Torrance employers are expected to be seeking stenographers, office workers, salespeople, day workers, machinists, nurses, welders, service station attendants, scientists, and other technical people as replacement or expansion hires.

Board Seeks Override Tax

(Continued from page one) rance are actually paying less than 50 per cent of this tax bill, since well over half of the local taxes are paid by industry," Hull explained.

Preparing for the return of nearly 27,000 youngsters to 34 Torrance Schools Wednesday, Torrance's teachers this week heard Superintendent J. H. Hull say that schools "must seek new horizons, educating children according to individual differences, and teaching them to ask 'why and how,' not merely 'who and what.'"

Hull also reported that Torrance schools will not have enough money to operate in 1961-62 unless voters okay an Oct. 11 override tax.

Mayor Albert Isen called Torrance's Schools the "greatest in the state" and urged approval of the upcoming tax proposal to "meet the needs of our growing town."

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Richard Fitzgerald declared "one of the major reasons many industries come to Torrance is that employees' children can attend our highly-rated schools."

School Board Member Clinton Cooke officially welcomed the 1000 teachers back to school. District administrators, in a 50-voice chorus, welcomed teachers by singing "Getting to Know You," "When You Were Sweet 16," and "We Believe."

Teachers returned to their classrooms Monday to prepare for the youngsters' return yesterday. Tuesday, Dr. Theodore Clymer, University of Minnesota educator discussed individual differences.

"We help parents develop good citizens rather than accept the point of view that we do the entire job for them. Society would be irresponsible and so would parents if they permitted us to do the entire job. We in turn would be irresponsible if we thought we could do the entire job, simply because we are not qualified, nor do we have the time," Dr. Hull declared.

Greatest challenge to teachers, he said, is individualizing instruction.

"No longer does good teaching involve aiming at the middle. No longer does good teaching permit development of the best at the expense of the rest. We are challenged by all of the children of all of the people with all of the variations of all the people in every classroom."

Hull urged teachers to help their students develop skills and to teach the youngsters to ask "why," "how," "how much," "which," and "why are things as they are."

The school override tax follows four years after the last override tax of 75 cents was approved by 4032 voters.

Opponents of the proposed tax claim not all the facts have been presented before the voters for school needs, nor has any attempt been made to limit the duration of this surcharge.
