Mumps Danger Cited by Officer

Mumps is not generally considered a serious communicable disease by the majority of people. Regardless of this, the complications that may occur during the course of this illness cause members of the medical profession to watch it closely and treat it carefully, Roy O. Gilbert, M.D., County Health Officer, said.

So far this year in Los Angeles County, some 4410 cases of mumps have been reported as against 2743 cases for the same period in 1959. This increase in the number of cases is not alarming, but if the trend continues throughout 1960 more parents than usual will become familiar with the symptoms of the disease, he added.

Mumps is caused by the mumps virus. These viruses are present in the saliva of an infected person and may be transmitted to others by means of droplet sprays that occur when the patient is talking, coughing, sneezing, and so forth. Or the infective agents may be spread through articles freshly soiled by saliva, he said.

TUBS ARE ATTRACTIVE

With recent emphasis on outdoor living, gardeners have come to find that almost anything grows in containers. There remain, however, a select few plants that seem especially attractive this way. Golden Bamboo is one of these; Dwarf Citrus, another.
