Quartet will join 50 other members of Federated Indian Tribes in full regalia at annual Sheriff's entertainment roundup, this year replete with new attractions designed to vividly recall the days when the West was still wild.

Indian Dancers Will Bring Color to Sheriff's Rodeo

Fifty Indian dancers in full regalia, members of the Federated Indian Tribes, led by Chief Spotted Wolf, will introduce new color and spectacle to the 1961 Sheriff's Rodeo Saturday night, June 24, in the Coliseum.

Representatives of nearly 60 tribes, they will perform three ancient ceremonial dances—the rarely seen Chipewa Canoe Dance, the Apache back-and-forth or Friendship Dance and something never before attempted, a dramatic torchlight War Dance.

Dancers will be accompanied by the beat of tom-toms and the rhythm of chants to bring to life authentically another lusty segment of the Old West.

The brilliantly clad Indians, each in the headdress and raiments of his native tribe, will make their entrance in the blaze of spotlights at the peristyle end of the Coliseum. Dividing into two bands, they will whoop it up on both sides of the stadium.

Cherokee, Sioux, Navajo, Pueblo, Canadian Cree, Seneca, Choctaw, Mohawk, these and many more belong to the Federation, a cultural group for those who are all or part Indian.

Composed of persons from a variety of professions, the FFT, according to Chief Spotted Wolf, a Bellflower chiropractor who traces his origins to the Cherokee and Sioux, assists its members to preserve their Indian heritage in a white man's world.

One of the new features of the rodeo this year, the Indian dancers will be adding a traditional touch to the western event. Historically, Indians participated in the first rodeo at Pecos, Tex., July 4, 1833, in the role of spectators.

Early reservations are urged for the huge outdoor extravaganza, with tickets available at Sheriff's stations, county marshal's offices, the Los Angeles Sheriff's Office and the Coliseum.

RECORD CARE TIP

While you're busy with your dusting chores, don't forget to spend some time at the record cabinet.

Your records will last longer and sound better if you keep them clean. Just dampen a sheet of Kleenex towel and whisk it lightly over the record surface. It won't scratch the surface, and it's almost completely lint-free. Wipe the needle carefully, too.
