Gardena Adult Consumer Class Begins Thursday

A class in consumer education is scheduled to start at Gardena Community Center, 1651 West 162nd St., Thursday at 9 a.m. William Johnston, principal of Gardena Adult School, said. At the request of Gardena homemakers, lessons will be given on planning healthful meals, 1962 ideas with foods for nutrition, 20 easy ways to help the budget, handy hints on home management, and buying for the home—furniture, fabrics and floor coverings.

Events planned in connection with the class include a visit to the Department of Water and Power on Dec. 7, a demonstration called, "Holiday Planning" covering gift wrapping, table decorations, preparation of holiday foods, planning your time and a free holiday recipe booklet for all.

Also by request, a noted garden authority is scheduled for one meeting to speak on planning a winter garden. The course will include educational trips to various food plants, large meat packing companies and bageries. Holiday activities will be particularly stressed starting late in November for Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Ella DeVall, instructor for the class, is well known as an authority and lecturer on consumer education.

She has had many years of experience in teaching and as a buyer for retail and manufacturing firms.

All interested homemakers may enroll at the Gardena Community Center, in the upstairs classroom at 9
