

Clipped Wings Club Holds Rummage Sale

Members of the Los Angeles Chapter of Clipped Wings Club, International, are not women who are inclined to rest on their past laurels. Today, Aug. 25, these former airline stewardesses (whose wings were "clipped" by the rule of retirement after marriage) are holding a rummage sale in Compton to benefit their charity, the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation.

Among members of the organization are former airline stewardesses of Torrance, Hollywood Riviera, Rolling Hills and Palos Verdes.

For the past six years, the club has supported CF work, helping to finance the research, training, and clinical activities sponsored by the foundation, which recently made a grant of $37,500 to Children's Hospital in Los Angeles.

Because the members of Clipped Wings live in areas scattered throughout almost all of Los Angeles County, their consistent success in their CF drives is not easy.

The organization meets monthly... overcoming the problems of distance and time.

Heading the group this year is Mrs. Lynne Frantz, Palos Verdes Estates, president. She is assisted by Mmes. James R. Hoskins, vice president; Paul E. Nor-sell, and William A. Horn-ing, secretaries; Cutis A. Martins, Rolling Hills, treas-urer; and George R. Bishop, historian.

Committee chairmen in-clude Mmes. William J. Mor-rison; Ed Wardle; Gerald F. Funk; H. W. Laughing-house; Gerald G. Harring-ton, Redondo Beach; Joseph Hammond; John Troeger; Robert E. Brede; Daniel W. Seregely; James J. Christen-sen, Claude Hilker, Ana-heim; G. R. Sullivan, John Munroe, and Frank X. Flem-ing.

'Queen for Cookout' Idea Might Tickle Dad's Fancy

Now that Dad has reached peak form at the outdoor grill, how about offering him the challenge of preparing the whole meal?

He is accustomed to providing the main dish, to be sure. But invariably Mom pitches in with a salad or vegetable. Maybe he's "ready" now to make you queen for a cookout.

That means he's responsible for everything — main dish, beverage, salad, vegetable and dessert. It would be a good time to have guests over, too, because you will have more time to get the house in order.

the table condiments. They should go out before the meal is prepared so there's no last minute rush while the food waits.

2. Use your children as "runners." This will be a great convenience and will involve them enough that they will delight in the effort to please Mom.

NOW TO MENU

3. Now to the menu. Let Dad pick the main dish and chances are he'll prepare the one he knows will please you most. A tossed salad is easy enough so long as he tackles that first and slips it in the refrigerator while he's at the grill. A "heat-up" vegetable should suffice and he can avoid running in the house to cook it if there's enough room on the grill. He has two approaches on dessert — either "all out" or quick-and-easy. Maybe he'd like to bake a cake the night before from a mix-

But it could be that a quart of ice cream would be more refreshing and simpler. In the beverage department, it's hard to beat iced tea for ease and appropriateness.

4. To make clean up time easier, use paper plates, cups, utensils and Kleenex table napkins. Dish washing will be at a minimum and laundering eliminated.

READY TO GO

5. Now he's all set. Get yourself ready, too. How about fashioning a queen's crown and putting it on just as he serves you? It'll let him know you appreciate his efforts.

By keeping the arrange-ments fairly simple yet leav-ing enough challenge to make it interesting to Dad, he'll be attracted to the queen-for-a-cookout plan. How do you present the idea? Clip out this article and serve it to him tonight with his coffee!

TIPS FOR DAD

Because his experience centers mostly around the meat course, he could use these tips in master-minding the rest of the meal:

1. In advance of the party, he naturally will check the charcoal supply, grill tools and the grill itself. But he could use a reminder for

George Washington was famous for many things, but it is a little known fact that he was famous for the beer that he brewed at Mount Vernon. The recipe he used, in his own hand-writing, is preserved in the New York City library.

Couples Bridge Tourney Nears

The August meeting of couples bridge, a Diana phil-anthropic as well as social event, was held at the Merle Coffee home in Torrance. Mrs. Coffee is a Diana past president.

As tournament-time draws near, only two meetings away, speculation is mount-ing as to who will be high-est scorer for this six-month period. At the end of each evening's play, scores are sent from the various homes to Mrs. Ronald Clarke, Palos Verdes, bridge chairman, who then keeps a running score for each participant. The lowest score of each player is discarded in the final tally.

Those competing in Fri-day evening's match were Mssrs. and Mmes. Ralph Rector, Hollywood Riviera; James McPherson, Palos Verdes Estates; and Patrick Callahan, South Redondo.

First prize was won by McPherson, with second prize going to Mrs. Patrick Callahan.

MOSAIC ART work is being practiced by youngsters at Walteria Methodist vacation church school, which closed Friday. Working on a class project are (left to right) Mrs. Eugene Dossi, teacher, and Debbie Dossi, Jim Falconer and Denise Dossi, who are in fifth and sixth grade classes at the vacation school. The mosaic is made of colored, crushed rock. It is three by eight feet in size.

'Beat the State,' Boasts Teacher Of Church Class

Having beat the state to it, Mrs. Gerald C. Griffin, teacher at the First Lutheran school, boasts that she has been teaching her young-sters a foreign language—Spanish — two years before California suggested it.

"A foreign language is something that is presented as fun to learn. Our ap-proach is through the me-dium of art and one of find-ing enjoyment in the spoken expression," she explained.

Between the ages of 4 and 10 a child's capacity to imi-tate is at a maximum. When listening to them at play, it is surprising how capable they are of making a variety of sounds.

IMMENSE MEMORIES

"Their memories are im-mense. Their expression in speech is flexible and learn-ing Spanish is a wonderful way of putting all these nat-ural skills to use," the teach-er explained.

"However, we would be unable to pioneer along these lines if the children lacked a good reading back-ground. Therefore we em-phasize reading, writing and arithmetic. Language is not taught while other subjects are disregarded. It would defeat our purpose to over-look the basic fundamentals. Spanish is offered as an en-richment to our curriculum. In the near future we hope to introduce a Spanish work-book to the first and second grades," she said.

"It is a fast moving world and we hope to better pre-pare youngsters for adjust-ments to the many situa-tions they will encounter. A we move forward from kin-dergarten our purpose is to help the children demon-strate their skill and devel-op the ability to think in Spanish.

"Our main objectives in terms of growth are an in-creased interest and under-standing of other people's cultures and languages," she concluded.
