ACS Clinical Fellowships Effective at Area Hospital

Two of the five clinical fellowships awarded by the American Cancer Society in California will be in effect during the next year at Harbor General Hospital in Torrance.

Clinical fellowships—post-graduate training of promising young physicians and dentists—is proving to be a valuable method employed by the American Cancer Society to insure that special knowledge of cancer problems is passed along to other doctors through local hospitals and medical and dental societies, officials said.

One of the Harbor General fellowships will be in surgery under the direction of Dr. Marshall J. Orloff, the second in pathology under the direction of Dr. Dean L. Moyer. Both grants are effective from July 1, 1963, through June 30, 1964.

Individual physicians and dentists interested in applying for any of these fellowships should apply directly to the respective institutions. In expanding research grant program of the American Cancer Society it is possible for additional institutions to obtain clinical fellowships.

Applications may be made by the institution to the national office of the American Cancer Society in New York City. However, the deadline for applications to cover the period beginning July 1, 1964, is Feb. 15, 1963.

Other clinical fellowships in California under grant from the American Cancer Society include fellowships at UCLA, the University of California School of Medicine and the Presbyterian Medical Center in San Francisco.

ANIMAL TRAINING

Jungleland in Thousand Oaks is noted for the training of animals for motion picture and TV work. One of its most celebrated animal stars is "Jackie," the MGM roaring lion.
