Your Southland Guide to the Best Time for Your Money

MARINER LEISURE LODGE, the new $1,000,000 motor hotel, restaurant and lounge on Pacific Coast Hwy. near Crenshaw, has construction features more typical of a luxury hotel than a motel. Sound-proofed walls and a central interior corridor system guarantee guests at the Mariner exceptional quiet and privacy. In addition to the entrance off the main corridor, each guest also has access to the pool area or private patio through sliding glass doors in every room.

Mariner Leisure Lodge Opens in Lomita Oct. 18

The October 18 opening of the $1,000,000 Mariner Leisure Lodge Motor Hotel and Restaurant on Pacific Coast Highway near Crenshaw, marks the second unit in what is destined to be one of the nation's largest motor hotel chains.

A joint development of Donald G. Hunt, Inc. of Inglewood and Clyde Kinzey, Leisure Lodge will complete construction on six Southern California motor hotels within the next year. Plans call for 15 throughout the state within three years, with eventual plans unlimited.

Leisure Lodge developers have also announced plans for a public stock issue on Leisure Lodge once the development has proven itself to be successful. Hunt has been in the construction and development business in Southern California since 1958, and has built five housing tracts, over 200 apartment buildings and hundreds of individual homes, primarily in the Inglewood, Westchester, and Southwest Los Angeles areas.

According to co-developer Clyde Kinzey, Leisure Lodge represents a new concept in developments of this type. "Because the motels are under mutual ownership," Kinzey said, "we will be in a position to coordinate the development and promotion of each unit to the benefit of the entire chain."

With each unit located in a key recreation area, the potential for tourist promotion between the individual motels is excellent. The first in the chain was the Seahorse Motel and coffee shop, located on the beach in Occochee within a few moments of excellent deep-sea and surf fishing, golfing, the San Luis Rey Mission and other tourist attractions and recreational activities.

The new Mariner is within an easy drive of Marineland, the King Harbor Marina, beaches, the proposed Ports O'Call Village, deep-sea fishing facilities, and is still just minutes from Long Beach, downtown Los Angeles, and Hollywood via the freeways.

Other new locations scheduled to begin construction this year are in Ventura and Costa Mesa, both situated with similar recreational potential closeby. "We intend offering package tours of California, typing in all of the recreational activities from one end of the state to the other," Kinzey said, "and at the same time offering reduced rates normally only available when spending your entire vacation at one location."

An advance reservation service will be utilized between the units.
