

Women Know How to Tell When Clothes Are Dry

Today's home laundry appliances bring all the skill and advantages of modern technology to the task of "doing the wash," according to Tom and Andy, owners of Liberty Home Appliances, 3445 Torrance Blvd., Torrance.

Automatic washers and dryers are a far cry from the old washboard and tub. But one manufacturer, he said, has discovered that in at least one step of the laundry process, the homemaker has had the best method all along. That's how to tell when the clothes are dry.

How does the homemaker know? She feels the clothes. 'BEST WAY'

And according to the Maytag company, that's still the best way. So Maytag research engineers designed an electronic control that literally "feels" the clothes as they tumble in the dryer. Through the refinements of modern electronics, this control does a more sensitive and thorough job than the human hands. It feels all the clothes constantly — checking parts of every item in the dryer all the time — not just a corner or two every so often.

When the clothes are all dry, the device automatically shuts off the dryer. This eliminates overdrying, which is apt to occur when a conventional timer control is set for too long a time and clothes continue to tumble in the heat after they are dry. Overdrying removes the natural moisture in fabrics, leaving them harsh, wrinkled and hard to iron.

'NO GUESSING'
Thus the Maytag dryer with electronic control takes the work — and the guesswork — out of drying clothes. You just set the control and the dryer does the rest.

The "Regular Fabrics" setting leaves clothes fluffy dry and ready for storing. The "Wash 'n Wear" setting does the same for modern man-made fabrics and, in addition, provides just the right temperature to relax wear wrinkles — leaving clothes almost wrinkle-free. A chime sounds to let the homemaker know when it's time to remove clothes, before they stop tumbling. This prevents "pile-ups" in the bottom of the dryer drum that can cause new wrinkles.

'DAMP DRY'
The "Damp Dry" setting leaves just the right amount of moisture in the clothes to ease ironing chores. A sprinkler attachment available on some models does the same for clothes dried completely for later ironing.

A fourth setting, "Air Fluff," provides a steady stream of heatless air, handy for such tasks as dusting drapes and throw rugs between laundings or getting rid of musty smells and wrinkles in stored, out-of-season items.

All models are available in either gas or electric versions to permit you to choose the fuel. And for complete flexibility in installation, venting may be done from either side or the back. If you live in an apartment or home where venting is impractical, there's a no-vent electric dryer, complete with electronic control.

'OTHER FEATURES'
Other features available on all Maytags include a triple-coated cabinet finish for maximum rust protection and glass-smooth, porcelain-finished drum that dries the most delicate items without snagging or tearing.

All Maytag air-flow dryers also have the exclusive

COMPACT LAUNDRY center meets minimum requirements for good laundering practice and has ideal location in hallway adjoining bathroom, with a passthrough for putting soiled clothes into baskets by type of washload. Area can be closed off when not in use. Bathroom sink is handy for pre-testing or other needs. (Maytag Home Laundry Idea Center)
