Instructor Studies Fashions in Europe

"Ten years ago European women were far behind the times in fashion, now they are our equals," Mrs. Mari- Robles, Ele Camino College clothing instructor, concluded from her three-month tour of Italy, Spain, Austria and Germany. Mrs. Robles, power sewing and pattern making teacher at El Camino, viewed the latest fashions and fashion trends while visiting Rome for a family reunion. "Styles seem to be a step ahead in Europe," Mrs. Robles added. "For instance, 10 years ago pointed shoes came into fashion. Now the square toe is already popular."

DRESSMAKERS

Lack of mass production has made it necessary for European women to employ dressmakers. Small shops that sell custom-made fashions are widely patronized. Rather than buy many dresses, the European woman prefers to purchase only one or two a year. Window displays in Rome do not make use of props or manikins. The clothes are suspended by nylon threads and appear to be hanging in mid-air. "Women in Europe do not neglect the beach as a place to show their finery," Mrs. Robles commented. The European woman would not think of going to the beach without two, or even four complete changes," she pointed out. "Cabanas are rented to provide a place to change from bathing suit to a sun dress, and then perhaps back to a different bathing suit," the instructor commented.

EUROPEAN

Mrs. Robles, whose career in the fashion industry led to teaching at El Camino College, plans to use new European fashion ideas in phases of the class work at El Camino. "It will serve as an influence and an aid to general teaching; but we do not intend to change the value and importance of what is already established in our classes," she concluded.

Pastor Announces Religious Telecast

A new telecast which explores religious questions and issues pertinent to space-age society is being released weekly on KCOP-TV, Channel 13, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday nights, according to an announcement made today by Manson Metcalf, pastor of the Torrance Seventh-day Adventist Church, 1610 Acacia Ave., Torrance.

The telecast series, "It Is Written," presents exclusive on-the-spot interviews with world-renowned scholars, views unusual scenes of distant planets through especially-constructed telescopes and reports on late scientific findings about the origin of earth as it links man's newest discoveries with his age-old questions about life, God and eternity, Pastor Metcalf said.

George Vandeman, narrator of the "It Is Written" telecasts, is a globe-trotting lecturer, noted Pastor Metcalf, who delights in discovering obscure facts about history, science and adventure, and bringing these facts into dramatic focus in popular presentations.

Saturday "It Is Written" made a visit to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery.

Future telecasts in the series include presentations on "The Secret of Happy Marriage," "Freedom Trial," and "The Heavens Are Telling," the Rev. Metcalf stated.
