This Is Your Torrance: The Future Is Bright . . .

(Compiled by the League of Women Voters, Torrance)

The future outlook for Torrance is a bright one. From the direction of current trends, it seems likely that the population will continue to be a youthful one.

Schools will continue to be challenged by the work and administrators will continue to meet this challenge.

As the students become old enough to take part time jobs, it may become necessary to make provision for youth employment.

The overall employment picture is also quite bright. Due to the broad industrial base, the city will weather whatever minor industrial changes occur.

Unemployment could pose an occasional problem, but long-range effects would be minimal.

Within the area which includes the communities of Gardena, San Pedro, Wilmington, Rolling Hills Estates, and Palos Verdes, it appears that Torrance is and will continue to be the commercial, industrial and residential center with the largest population and the broadest economic base.

In the years to come, it is felt that the city of Torrance will continue to be vigorous and active, will maintain a high educational level and active political life, and will continue to provide advance planning for diversified land use.
