El Camino's Dr. Hileman Reports on His Research

Dr. Jack C. Hileman, of Torrance, chemistry instructor at El Camino College, appeared before the California Teachers at Fresno to speak on "Zero Valence Metal Carbonyls for Teaching Molecular Structure." The report concerned applications to chemical education of the research work Hileman carried out at UCLA during 1960 and 1961. At El Camino since 1950, Dr. Hileman was on sabbatical leave during this period, studying under a National Science Foundation Faculty Fellowship. While at UCLA, he was the first chemist to synthesize technetium carbonyl. Hileman has written the chapters in two technical books, "The Encyclopedia of Chemical Technology" is being edited by Anthony Standen, John Wiley and Sons, and will be published by Interscience Publishing Co. Preparative Organic Chemistry is edited by Dr. W. C. Jolly, of the University of California, and also will be published by Interscience. Dr. Hileman is married.
