Passover to Be Observed By Jews Week of April 8

By RABBI HENRI E. FRONT

Temple Menorah

Passover, the Jewish festival commemorating the deliverance of the Hebrew slaves from Egyptian bondage, will be celebrated in every Jewish home beginning Monday night April 8. The week-long holiday teaches the concept of freedom. Not only freedom for the individual, but most important of all, freedom for all men everywhere whether enslaved in body or shackled by economic or spiritual bonds.

The holiday begins with a Passover meal called "Seder" (order of the meal). Non-Jews will be familiar with this Seder since the Christian ceremony of Communion, Christ's Last Supper, and the use of the bread and wine in the Communion Service, all originated in the Jewish observance. Jesus himself, a practicing Jew and a Rabbi, was attending a Seder in the "upper room" according to the New Testament description. The Seder is a religious service, replete with special foods symbolizing the rigors of slavery in Egypt, and the joy of new found freedom.

A Congregational Seder open to the community, will be held by Temple Menorah of the South Bay, 1101 Camino Real, Redondo Beach on Tuesday night April 9. Reservations may be obtained by calling the temple office, FRontier 8-8444.

Passover is dedicated to the dream and the hope that have filled the hearts of men from the time the Israelite ancestors went forth out of Egypt. Dedicated to freedom, the festival commemorates the occasion when a slave state was forced to recognize the dignity of man.

In the Seder Service, the Jew prays that his God-given right may be enjoyed universally. To make this hope come true, the Jew is bidden by the Lord to see to it that all persons, regardless of race, color or national origin, have all the rights, freedoms and privileges which are his by virtue of being a child of God. This Jewish concept is found in the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag in the words "with liberty and justice for all."

The story leading to the Exodus started when Joseph, favorite son of the patriarch Jacob was sold by his brethren to a caravan of merchants on their way to Egypt. When Joseph grew up, he endeared himself to the officers of the Egyptian government and, because of his wisdom, was called before the king to interpret two dreams which plagued him.

He predicted seven years of plenty to be followed by seven years of famine, and suggested that during the years of plenty, sufficient food be conserved to last during the years of the famine. As a result of the interpretations, Joseph became a minister in charge of food storage and distribution.

One of the later kings Pharaoh, disregarded the help Joseph had given to the Egyptian Empire and the loyalty of the Jewish people to the state.

The Jews were regimented into forced labor and compelled to erect the pyramids of Egypt.

Pharaoh ordered all male Jewish children killed immediately after birth.

To save her infant boy, a Jewish mother Jochabed, placed him in a basket and floated it down the river Nile. There, the child was found by Pharaoh's daughter, the princess.

Without knowing that Jochabed was the baby's mother, the princess asked her to raise the child the first few years, and then to bring him to the Palace. The Princess named the boy "Moses." During his early life, Jochabed imbued Moses with knowledge of his Hebrew ancestors.

When he grew up, Moses chose to return to his people rather than enjoy the life of a prince in a kingly palace.

One day while herding sheep, Moses beheld a burning bush in the midst of the wilderness. Flames enveloped the bush, but its leaves and branches were not consumed by the fire. It was then God revealed Himself to go before Pharaoh and command him to let the Israelites go.

Ten plagues were visited upon the Egyptians before Pharaoh finally permitted the Israelites to leave Egypt and march through the Red Sea unto freedom and nationhood. Thus it is that the Passover is celebrated in commemoration of that event which set an enslaved people free and permitted them to worship the One, true God in whose image all mankind was created.

The holiday is essentially a family festival, celebrated around the dinner table. Special food are prepared and eaten during the course of the service preceding and following the actual meal.

Matzo (unleavened bread) replaces regular bread, symbolizing the bread of affliction or suffering which the people ate in Egypt as they fled slavery.

Wine represents the joy of freedom. Bitter herbs represent the bitterness of people who are slaves.

An egg, symbolizes the new life of freedom which the people were about to enter, bursting out of the shell of slavery into the fruitful period of freedom.

Charoses (mortar) is a dish made of nuts, apples, raisins, cinnamon, and wine. Its color is that of clay or mortar. It is eaten to recall the bricks made in Egypt in building the Pyramids, and the mortar used in building palaces and temples for the Pharaohs.

The Yamb Bone, symbolic of animals worshiped by the Egyptians, is placed on the table to show that idols are powerless to help or to injure and that only God rules the universe.

The entire service is read from a special prayerbook called the Haggadah (the narrative).

The Mayor's Birthday . . .

A FABLE FOR MODERNS

By ROBERT SAUNDERS
Age 11

One day in Crazytown, U.S.A., Mayor Shortstuff, who was an old man of 11, decided to have a party for the town to celebrate his 12th birthday.

Now, the townspeople were all for the party, with its gallon of ice cream, fifty-gallon pitcher of chocolate milk, and all the sandwiches.

The party was to be held at the town hall and everybody was to help decorate it, for it was truly a major holiday. Toward the end of the day, the young boys of 70 were to organize a baseball game. Everything was fine except for one little thing: There was no town hall!

The mayor knew he had forgotten something, but he couldn't think of what it was. Then he remembered: There was no town hall. The mayor called all the town carpenters and said, "We have a problem. There is no town hall for the party and the gallon of ice cream, the fifty-gallon pitcher of chocolate milk, and all the sandwiches."

The mayor told the carpenters to build a town hall. He said, "I will give you a month to build it in, because my birthday is in 33 days."

The carpenters said to the mayor, "We have no tools to build a town hall with." The mayor sent to the next town, which was Crookedville, to borrow some tools to build a town hall with. When the carpenters received the tools, they started to dig a foundation. But, the head carpenter thought of something.

He went to the mayor and asked, "What does a town hall look like?"

The mayor was in deep thought for about five minutes.

He didn't know what to say to the carpenter. He looked in all his books to find a picture of a town hall. He even went to the library, which was something he didn't normally do.

Finally, the mayor sent a letter to Crookedville to ask what a town hall looked like.

But the mayor of Crookedville sent back a reply saying he couldn't find any information on what a town hall looked like and Crookedville didn't have a town hall, either. So, he couldn't send a picture of one.

Then the mayor sent to another neighboring town and asked for a picture of a town hall. Now, it so happened that this town had just built a new town hall. So, the mayor had a picture on hand to send to Mayor Shortstuff.

When the mayor received the picture he immediately called for the head carpenter. The head carpenter studied the picture and then showed it to his men. The carpenters then finished the foundation, then the head carpenter had another question to ask the mayor. He went to the mayor and asked him, "What is a town hall made of?"

Quickly the mayor sent another letter to the neighboring town to ask what a town hall is made of. The mayor of the neighboring town sent a letter to Mayor Shortstuff saying that a town hall was made of bricks. The mayor called the head carpenter again. He told him that a town hall was made out of bricks. Two of the 33 days had passed. The head carpenter and his men worked quickly on the town hall. They finished it in 29 1/2 days. Now the mayor, all the townspeople, and the carpenters were all happy.

On the day of the party, the women of the town baked the mayor a big birthday cake and presented it to him at the party in the new
