Too Late to Plant Roses? The Experts All Say 'N'

Thanks to the vigor and everblooming qualities of today's modern roses it's never too late to plant them during the growing season.

Right now is the time for setting - out potted roses. Container grown plants, as they are sometimes called, will take root quickly in your garden to lend dazzling beauty, bloom and color to the landscape this very season.

Potted rose plants provide an extra planting period for gardeners and a wonderful opportunity for everyone to pick out some of those special, new varieties that may have been overlooked in earlier plantings this season.

Potted rose bushes appear in paper, plastic or metal containers at local nurseries or garden centers.

The bushes have been pre-planted and are already growing. Usually you will find these plants with leaves and often with actual buds and blooms as well.

Many rose lovers prefer to plant roses in this way because it gives them a chance to make their choices from plants in magnificent bloom.

There is every class and color to choose from in potted roses. The prize plants for this year are the two 1963 All-America Roses Tropicana and Royal Highness.

They shouldn't be overlooked, though it would be difficult for the eye to miss either of these extraordinary varieties. They are the winners of this country's only major national rose competition.

If a brilliant orange-red bud or flower catches your eye it will most probably be the unique Tropicana rose, a champion of thirteen major international awards in addition to its 1963 AARS honor. Tropicana is one of the top choices for this year, as it will be for years to come. This magnificent hybrid tea produces large blooms abundantly for beginner and veteran alike.

Royal Highness, co-holder of the 1963 AARS award.

is about as pretty a pastel pink as any rose lover could hope for. This regal and wonderfully fragrant rose dresses its plant continuously with large, classically formed hybrid tea blooms that have a unique frost-like coating on their shill-pink petals.

It will be one of the eye-catchers in the garden, and a blue-ribbon winner if you are an exhibitor.

Transferring a container rose to your garden is quite easy. Just give special attention to the earthen ball, which should remain intact so that roots are not disturbed. Here's all there is to planting:

1. Keep the soil in the container moist until ready to plant.

2. Prepare hole so that bud union (the knuckle where canes begin) will be at ground level. (Or check with the nurseryman for proper depth.) Allow for at least six inches of space all around the earthen ball.

3. Open a paper pot by cutting down each side with a knife. If in a metal can have it cut at the nursery but leave the plant in the container. Remove plant by holding earthen ball gently so that no soil is loosened or broken from roots. Do not lift from the top of the plant.

4. Place in hole and fill-in soil to about the top of the earthen ball and tamp the soil firm. Water well to settle soil.

Once set-out, potted roses ask only the same routine maintenance and watering as your other plants. They will provide many exquisite blooms for the garden as well as home arrangements all through Summer and into Fall.

A CALM AND ELEGANT corner of a living room furnished in true 18th Century reproductions but containing a Hi-Fi-Stereo unit is just as likely to give out with modern music as 18th-Century Bach. The unit with tone fidelity might hum softly during tea, and change its mood for gay parties. Beyond the function as a source of entertainment, the handsome design of the rich mahogany veneers is styled to be the focal point of the room.

Ground Broken For Day School

Ground has been broken for a new, $300,000 facility for Rolling Hills Country Day School, to be erected at the corner of Crenshaw Blvd and Palos Verdes Drive North in Rolling Hills Estates.

School children and civic leaders shared honors at the ceremonies, with a boy and girl from each class, first through sixth grade, turning a shovel of earth to start construction. The buildings will total 14,000 square feet, set on a landscaped site of three acres.

Rolling Hills Vice-Mayor, Mrs. Teena Clifton, representing the community, pointed out the phenomenal population growth in the Peninsula-South Bay areas and the corresponding need for schools.

"We are proud of our cultural and educational institutions, both public and private," Mrs. Clifton declared, "and we feel that the addition of a fine new private elementary school such as Rolling Hills Country Day School is of great value to the entire area."

Reverend Robert A. Toumery of St. Francis Episcopal Church, Palos Verdes Estates, led pupils, parents and friends of the school in a brief invocation.

Clifford O. Harvey, Jr., father of Keith Harvey, second grade pupil, briefly related the twelve-year history behind the school, starting with Miss Dawn's School in Manhattan Beach in 1951, up to the full six-grade elementary school which opened in 1961.

Harvey referred to the explosive growth of the South Bay since 1951—a five-fold increase with population now in excess of one quarter million. "I don't need to dwell on the importance of education in today's world," he said. "The problems of juvenile delinquency, unemployment due to automation and the needs of advanced technologies speak for them-

Fence Steps In Sections On Lot Slope

Do you have a sloping lot with a stair-step fence problem?

A good way to solve your fence building problems on such a property is to use sectional fences, built in desired lengths or sections with each section one, two, or even three feet below the one immediately above.

Some landscape architects develop some interesting fence patterns for these section step - down fences. Among popular styles is a screen-type section made by nailing 1x2 inch cedar boards to a top and bottom 2x4 rail set firmly between 4x4 cedar posts.

Each section is a complete unit. The general and most attractive style is to design a frame for the screen section of 1x2 boards. This can be done by using a 2x4 cap nailed to the top of the posts. The cap can be one foot or so above the screen and there can be decorative boards set at wide spacing to tie cap board with the screen.

A good effect is obtained by placing the 1x2 boards vertically in one section and horizontally in adjoining sections. This gives a pleasant contrasting texture. The cedar can be allowed to weather to a soft, silvery gray, or the fence can be stained or painted to suit the home owner's taste.

'Cooperative Living' Unit Planned for 16-Acre Site

Construction is under way for South Del Amo Pacific Cooperative Apartments, Inc., the second of four cooperatives being organized by Sovereign Development Company at 3300 Carson St. in Torrance. Only two of the 88 units are still available in this adult group.

The four cooperative groups are being developed by Sovereign under Section 213 of the National Housing Act, which gives the benefit of FHA 5 1/4% insured financing. A total of 308 garden type apartment - homes, with eight swimming pools, eight recreation buildings, six putting greens and two playgrounds, will cover the 16-acre site.

The north section, designed especially for families, will have ground-breaking shortly, according to R. D. Keillor, president. Members of the first adult group, consisting of 80 units on the east portion of the site, will be taking occupancy within 45 to 60 days. The third adult group, to be located on the west portion, which is 80 percent reserved, will also soon be under construction. Approved members are now custom-designing their individual apartments with the help of the architectural consultants.

The "Cooperative" as a means of home ownership has been overwhelmingly accepted. The members form a non - profit cooperative housing corporation, which in turn issues a share of stock representing the investor-resident's ownership of his apartment unit. The cost of the "share" is very nominal, although each member must provide a personal financial statement to assure the group of his financial stability.

The investor - residents, through the efforts of their elected board of directors, operate the cooperative facilities themselves. Costs, similar to those of maintaining a single house, are set up on a yearly operating budget, and then pro-rated according to the size of the various apartment units, and payable on a monthly basis.

The maintenance budget varies according to the expenditures approved by the membership. Monthly payments, which start when the apartments are ready for occupancy, include a portion allocated towards the mortgage principal. Equity is thus accumulated by each member - owner. The "share" increases in value just as does any other housing investment.
