

EAGER EATER at the watermelon eating contest at Certi-Bond store is shown digging in fervently during the afternoon of contests. The boys, by the rules of the contest, used only the mouth. Any aid by such tools as hands were forbidden by the rules.

OVERALL VIEW of one of the tables in the watermelon eating contest at Certi-Bond store is shown above. Teams representing the Gardena YMCA and the Torrance YMCA took part. The event took place in the patio during the store's open house week. Sixteen boys were on each team. Mayor Albert Isen of Torrance headed the team of judges.

AWARDS ARE presented by Herbert Olmstead, Certi-Bond store manager (center) to James Mueller (left), representing the Gardena YMCA, and to John Bramhall (right), representing Torrance YMCA. The first contest was a tie, the second was won by the Torrance YMCA. The store donated $50 to each winning team and $25 went to the losers.

FROM CRADLE TO CORDUROY
Corduroy came into its own when manufacturers of baby clothes took it over. According to the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Assn., infants now go directly from flannel to pastel-colored corduroy and practically live in it year around. Homemakers approve because they know they can machine-wash this sturdy fabric, toss it into a gas clothes dryer and have it ready to wear in little more than an hour.
