

YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'Woman Blaming You Unjustly . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: Phyllis, our 14-year-old daughter, invited her girl friend to spend the night with her. The two girls decided they'd like to have some blonde streaks in their brown hair. They went out and bought a bottle of extra strong peroxide and you ought to see what they did to themselves. When Phyllis and her friend showed up at the breakfast table this morning my husband and I were absolutely horrified.

The girls were sheepish and admitted that their hair didn't turn out the way they had hoped it would. The guest muttered, "I'm afraid my mother will kill me."

An hour later I received a phone call from the girl's mother. She was furious and said it was my fault. According to her, I should have kept my eye on the girls. The woman said she was taking her daughter to the beauty shop and getting her hair cut off—even if the child winds up looking like Yul Brynner.

Was it my fault? Should I insist our daughter have her hair cut off too—as punishment? I need your advice. —HAVOC IN HINSDALE

Dear Havoc: Fourteen-year-old girls should not need policing. The woman is blaming you unjustly.

In my book your daughter has suffered enough. Rather than give her a prison hair cut which would only add to her humiliation, insist that she earn the price of a professional hair tint, and have her hair restored to its natural color.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband passed away in 1959. I am 58 years old and have been the constant companion these past two years of a widower who is 63. I enjoy this man's company a great deal, not along with his married children and his grandsons call me "Nanna."

Last week, for no apparent reason, he said to me, "I'll never marry again. Why should I? Everything is just the way I want it." I was deeply hurt because I was expecting a proposal of marriage at any moment. Things are NOT the way I want them, Ann. I would like to get married again—if not to this man, then to someone else. Shall I tell him how I feel? Or would it be prudent to wait a little longer and hope he will ask (Continued on Page 12)
