YOUR PROBLEMS by Ann Landers

'Stubborn Attitude Bring You Nothing'

Dear Ann Landers: My husband, my sons, my doctor and the Rabbi tell me I am wrong. Maybe I am, but how can a mother change her feelings? My oldest son, Milton, came to me four months ago and said, "Mother, I am married." I was very happy—until he began to tell me about the girl. She is not of our religion. She has been married twice before, and she is eight years older than Milton.

I told Milton that as long as he lives he should never bring that girl into my house because I cannot accept her as a daughter-in-law.

The rest of the family sees Milton and his wife every few weeks. They all tell me she is a fine girl and that they are very happy. I didn't raise Milton for a marriage like this—even if he is happy.

You are a mother, Ann, and you must understand how I feel. Am I wrong?—S.S.W.

Dear S.S.W.: Yes, I understand how you feel. But your unforgiving, stubborn attitude will bring you nothing but loneliness and misery.

According to my count, this girl has four strikes against her. I can't blame you for being unhappy about Milton's choice. But she is Milton's wife now and you should accept her.

Dear Ann Landers: When I was going through the pockets in my husband's work trousers before putting them into the machine I found a bank deposit slip. It was made out under his nickname. The account I know of is under his full name, which means this second account is a secret one.

I was so hurt I don't know what to do. We have been married less than a year and I thought he trusted me in all matters. This proves I was wrong. Should I tell my husband I found the deposit slip and ask him why he tried to hide the money from me? Or would it be best to pretend I don't know about it and hope he will tell me on his own? Thank you.—NOT SNOOPING JUST WASHING

Dear Not Snooping: Tell your husband you found the bank slip and that you think it is wonderful he wanted to surprise you with a little nest-egg. Don't give the impression (Continued on Page 28)
