

State Colleges To Get First Student Unions

The 150-year-old tradition of student unions on college and university campuses is about to gain a foothold in the California State colleges, one of the world's largest systems of higher education.

Two state college campuses, San Diego and San Jose, are nearing start of construction on an estimated $4 million "college unions," which will be the first in the 18-campus system.

Students at three other campuses, Fresno, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and Chico, are in the advanced stages of planning college unions and most other state colleges are in the midst of developing proposals.

ADOPTION OF the tradition founded in England during the mid-19th Century has been made possible mainly through enabling state legislation and the growth and maturing of a number of state colleges, according to Dr. Glenn S. Dumke, chancellor of the system.

In the past, funds from higher education construction appropriations have not been available for such auxiliary needs due to the explosive growth and demand for basic classroom facilities, he said.

But three years ago, the State Legislature enacted legislation aimed at facilitating student union development by providing a new means of financing.

The California State college board of trustees is now authorized to borrow funds and construct college unions with funds to be repaid from revenue raised by the students themselves. To do so, the law requires student bodies to hold elections where they may vote voluntarily to assess each student a maximum of $20 annually for loan repayments.

THE TRUSTEES require students to provide at least 10 per cent of construction costs prior to groundbreaking. The first campuses to undertake the student union projects are just now attaining their fund-raising goals for this purpose.

The trustees have ordered that no state funds be used for the student union development program, in keeping with the master plan for higher education in California which discourages use of tax money for such auxiliary construction.

Dr. Dumke pointed out that his staff closely examines each project individually to insure the feasibility of the development based on student body financial ability. In a careful reviewing process, each step of the construction program from the initial proposal to planned activities in the completed college union is studied by the chancellor's staff.

CONSTRUCTION funds will come from revenue bonds purchased at a low rate of interest most likely by the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, which already has tentatively approved loans of approximately $3 million to the San Diego campus and $2,500,000 to San Jose.

Borrowed funds will be used for construction costs only with equipment to be purchased by student bodies, according to Dr. Dumke.

Limited federal funds — only about $30 millions is available in 1964-65 for student union construction throughout the country — will restrict the rate of student union development in the State colleges, he said.

HOWEVER, the possibility of financing by private lending institutions is being explored and may provide another source of revenue, he said.

Educators believe the college unions will be valuable additions to the state colleges in providing a center for closer social and intellectual relations among students, alumni and faculty.

The student union, as other institutions, has proved an effective means of involving the student as completely and coherently as possible in higher education and providing a feeling of identity with college life, they believe.

TEACHING DEADLINE Foreign language instruction must be conducted in the 6th, 7th and 8th grades in all California public schools beginning not later than September, 1965, as mandated by the State Legislature.

Safety Council Drafts Back-to-School 'Lessons'

Start of the new school year, now close at hand, has prompted the drafting of a series of "back-to-school lessons" for parents of young children which have just been released by the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of the National Safety Council.

If the small child walks to school, the safety council urges the parents to learn these four lessons:

- Learn the suggested "safest route to school" in your neighborhood and then walk to school with the child until such time as you feel he is competent to walk the route safely alone;
- Teach your child to cross streets only at corners, preferably in a painted crosswalk and teach him to walk, not run, across the street;
- Teach your child to wait for a "fresh green light" before crossing a signalized intersection, and to watch for turning traffic;
- If a crossing guard is on duty near the school, teach your child to respect and obey the guard.

If either parent drives the child to school, the "Back-to-School Lessons" for parents include the following:

- Deliver your child and pick him up only on the school side of the street;
- Never double park near the school, not only because this is illegal but because many children have been killed or injured entering the street from between parked cars;
- Never stop in a crosswalk to let your child in or out of the car;

Proper Address Essential for Social Security, Warns Chief

Faulty notification of a change of address can cause considerable delay in the receipt of monthly checks by social security beneficiaries, Miles Davis, social security district manager in Torrance, has warned.

Davis said the Social Security Administration processes change of address from 17 and 19 million actions for beneficiaries each month. A sizeable number involved changes of address.

Changes of address can be processed quickly and easily if beneficiaries use cards supplied by the social security office.
