Serfus Day Awaits New Freshmen

Bishop Montgomery High School's freshman class will face its first trial by fire Friday.

During the day, more than 400 unsuspecting freshmen will be sold to seniors for one day as the school marks its fourth annual Serfus Day. Seniors, remembering their own experiences four years ago, have drawn up plans for their slaves which would awe Simon Legree.

Gerry Agnew, senior class president, has announced that the price of slaves will be 75 cents. If a senior has a buck handy, he can get two slaves. Proceeds from the slave day will go toward the senior project. In the past three years, the funds have helped to pay for a marquee, a football scoreboard, and the statue of the school's namesake.

AMONG THE surprises awaiting freshmen boys are penny-pushing contests, shoe shines, and some piggy-pack rides. Freshmen will be on the giving end and the penny-pushing contest promises some interesting fun.

In addition to their duties as slaves, freshmen girls will compete in a homemade hat contest, with prizes for the prettiest, funniest, and most original hats to be awarded.

Surviving members of the Class of 1968 will be invited to attend a Welcome Freshmen Friday evening. Admission is 75 cents for each student, with proceeds again going to the senior project.

The purpose of Serfus Day is to acquaint freshmen with the upperclassmen and the school. There has never been any casualties and almost everyone enjoys the activities.
