PIANO LESSONS GIVEN

CULTURAL LEADER . . . Marian the librarian, played by Tamara Fowler, watches as 76 trombones and 110 cornets come marching down River City's Main Street. Production of "Music Man" will be presented at El Camino College Saturday evening only at 8:30 p.m.

'Music Man' to Sound At El Camino Saturday

Meredith Willson's "Music Man" will be presented at El Camino College Saturday at 8:30 p.m. by the Bluth Brothers' Theater of Culver City.

The musical comedy will star veteran actors Tamara Fowler and Richy Clark, backed by a cast of 50 and an 8-piece orchestra.

Miss Fowler has appeared in such musical shows as "Damn Yankees," "Guys and Dolls," and "South Pacific." Richy Clark has played leading parts in "South Pacific" and "Unsinkable Molly Brown." Clark will be the fast-talking con man Harold Hill.

Director-co-producer Don Bluth, formerly of the Disney Studios, serves as set director also. Co-producer and musical director Fred Bluth directs and stages the musical numbers assisted by choreographer Ellen Davis.

Following a ten week run at the Bluth Brothers theater in Culver City, the production is now touring Southern California.

Instructor Represents West High

Terence McMurray, a history instructor at West High, has been selected to represent the school at the fourth annual Current Affairs Seminar for Outstanding Social Studies Teachers. The seminar will be held Oct. 17 at the Times Building.

Highlight of the seminar will be discussion of the role of newspapers in the national election and a round-table on the problems of reporting political news.

McMurray also will participate in a news conference at which George Murphy and Gen. Pierre Salinger will be guests. Murphy and Salinger are candidates for U. S. Senator from California.

Law in Action

Felonies are more serious than misdemeanors.

As a rule, the felon loses his civil rights: his right to vote, to serve as an executor, as a juror, and to hold certain positions of trust. He may not serve in the armed forces or hold certain state or government licenses.

Once in prison, the felon may lose other basic rights. The policy of state prisons has long been to encourage religion among inmates, but not if their beliefs greatly interfere with prison management.

Prisoners still can hold their beliefs, but they cannot gather and plot to overthrow prison authority.

STILL PRISON officials do not have a free hand. They cannot subject convicts to cruel physical punishment, nor deny them the right to consult their lawyer or to communicate with others.

A prisoner's free speech is subject to restrictions. The prison may censor letters, papers or documents, even those that go to his attorney, if he degrades the prison authorities.

Prisoners are limited in making contracts, owning property, or engaging in activities outside of prison.

PRISONERS OUT on parole are still subject to some of the prison restrictions. Any reasonable restriction can be imposed, and its violation can be grounds for putting the convict back in prison.

About the only way an ex-felon gets back all his civil rights is for the governor to give him a pardon.

One may be put on probation and never go to prison or jail, even if convicted of a felony. At the end of probation, if he has met all the conditions, the person can ask for and often get all his civil rights back.

Probation is not available for all crimes, and in other cases the judge has wide discretion to give probation after he hears the probation officer's request.
