Tartar Teen Talk

By Pam Flemming

Presenting... "The Rainmaker!"
 The annual Senior Play will be presented Friday night at the Torrance High School Auditorium.
 Chosen for this year's presentation is Richard Nash's "The Rainmaker." Currently playing Broadway under the title "110 in the Shade," the play promises everything from laughter to tears.
 Drama centers on a western family of 1920, living on a cattle ranch in time of severe drought. Bill Starbuck, rainmaker by profession, appears on the scene. Starbuck is bargaining for a chance to "make rain." However, the family gets a little more than they bargained for as the play progresses.
 Actors for this year's play are Mike Hubbard, Richard Tiernan, Lynn Barenz, Keith Benton, Bill Mooneyham, and Jim Cooper. Rebecca Goldstein, only girl in the cast, will make her first appearance on the THS stage.

Griffith Park Sets Yule Show

Griffith Park Observatory will present its traditional Christmas season planetarium theater production, "The Christmas Star," from Tuesday, Dec. 15, through Sunday, Jan. 3.
 Dr. Clarence H. Clemminshaw, the director of the observatory, said that the Zeiss planetarium projector will allow audiences attending presentations of the Yule show to see the sky of Palestine as it was at the time of Christ's birth, almost 2,000 years ago.
 "The Christmas Star" will be offered at 3 and 8:30 p.m., Tuesdays through Sundays, with added matinees at 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. on weekends and New Year's Day, according to Dr. Clemminshaw. The municipal facility will be closed Christmas Eve and Christmas Day so that members of its staff can be with their families.
 The observatory's current attraction is "The Sun's Family," a show emphasizing the five planets visible to the naked eye from earth and a beautiful comet. This presentation concludes its run on Sunday, Dec. 13, Dr. Clemminshaw said.
 Nominal admission fees of 75 cents for adults and 30 cents for students under 18 are in effect for the planetarium theater's shows. But there is no charge for tours through the Observatory's Hall of Science, which is open from 2 to 10 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and from 1 to 10 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

THE PRODUCTION boasts three sets, all part of the country-like atmosphere. Costumes have been made by Torrance High girls.
 Mr. Charles Slater, drama coach, made this statement for the school newspaper, "It is a warm, sensitive comedy with moments of poignancy and a situation with which students can easily identify themselves."
 Curtain time for "The Rainmaker" is 8 p.m. Tickets for the performance will be sold for $1 at the door. Student ASB price is 50 cents. Traditionally, profits from the play are donated to the Senior Class.
 A highly entertaining evening is promised. The public is cordially invited.
TARTARS HAVE caught the spirit of Christmas early this year. Up-coming events for the season include the annual Festival of Lights to be held Dec. 17 at 8 p.m. This is the annual THS Hall of Science, which is Christmas musical production, Dec. 18, of course, is that gala event... the Winter Formal.
