

UC Tuition Fees Now Under Study

By LEONARD KREIDT Education News Service

Some alternate or supplementary method of meeting the mushrooming costs of a higher education will be considered by the California Legislature — perhaps in 1967.

One method already being probed is charging tuition — a move so far firmly avoided.

Under consideration is a system of deferred payment of tuition proposed in the 1963 and 1965 general sessions of the Legislature by Assemblyman John L. E. Collier (R-South Pasadena).

The 1965 bill, AB 600, was referred to the two-year interim between general sessions for study. The first hearing was held this month at Long Beach State College by the Higher Education Subcommittee of the Assembly Interim Committee on Education.

WITNESSES divided into those who favor charging junior college, State College and University of California students tuition as a matter of meeting "astronomic" projected costs and those who, as a matter of encouraging universal education, object to abandoning the California tradition of tuition-free higher education.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post said a $100 tuition charge at all three levels would produce $20 million. The operating budget requests of the State College System and the University of California for 1966-67 total $409.7 million, up $74.7 million from 1965-66. Possible tuition charges discussed during the hearing ranged from $100 to $800 per year.

Post took no position for or against tuition, but pointed out that a tuition charge would relieve sales and property taxpayers, who tend to be those least able to pay.

COLLIER'S idea in deferring tuition payments is that it would shift part of the burden to a segment of the citizenry potentially more able to pay for it. The extra lifetime earning power attributable to the possession of a bachelor's degree is calculated at $100,000 to $200,000. Reimbursement of the state for tuition would not commence until a graduate's earnings reached $4,000.

Collier said he feels this adequately answers the objection that a tuition charge would inhibit poor but able persons from entering institutions for higher learning.

Anti-tuition witnesses pointed out that the cost of college instruction is a negligible investment for the state to make in comparison to the economic returns from a better educated citizenry and the higher tax returns which will be realized from higher-paid, college-trained, professional people.

CONCERN was expressed that tuition charges in the State Colleges and the University might divert students to the junior colleges, thus increasing the pressure on local property taxpayers. However, Post said indications are that the upper level facilities would continue to be filled to capacity with or without a tuition charge.

Testifying in favor of tuition were Charles Smithers of the State Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Max Benton of the California Taxpayers Association, and Assemblyman Don Mulford of Berkeley.

Opposing were Dr. Willard Spalding, director of the Coordinating Council on Higher Education; Dr. Daniel Aldrich, chancellor of the University of California at Irvine; Dr. Wendell C. Black, California Junior College Association; Dr. Glenn S. Dumke, chancellor of the State College System; Dr. David Feldman of the California Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO; and William Barton, legislative advocate of the California Teachers Association.

State's First Official Highway Map Due Soon

California's first official highway travel map are rolling off the presses and a million copies will be available for distribution to the public in Mid-January.

A preview copy was presented to Governor Edmund G. Brown this week by John Erreca, director of the Department of Public Works.

In addition to the standard features most highway maps have in common, the new map is augmented on the cover with 25 photographs and a text aimed at providing California drivers with timely information.

ONE SUCH section is devoted to safe driving tips and another describes the function of the California Highway Patrol and outlines the easiest way in which a driver can obtain emergency assistance. A brief description of the state traffic laws is included.

Also explained are the freeway and expressway complex, and scenic highway systems. California's pay-as-you-go highway construction program is outlined in a brief statement that pertains to licenses and to the taxes highway users pay.

A message from Governor Edmund G. Brown, typical scenes of California highways and inset maps of the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas complete the cover side.

THE MAP proper identifies freeways and other divided highways. California elements of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways that have not yet been constructed also are shown.

The locations of mountain passes and a symbol to indicate whether they are closed by winter snows and the whereabouts of ski areas will be of interest to winter drivers.

State parks are identified, along with information pertaining to camping sites, and national parks and monuments are outlined by boundaries. Roadside safety rest areas also are shown. All

California missions and many of the colleges and universities are identified. Some of the state's more prominent unofficial points of interest will be made easier for drivers to find.

THE MAP was originally scheduled for distribution in October but deadlines could not be met. Requests for several hundred thousand copies have been received by the California Division of Highways from schools, chambers of commerce, service clubs, civic groups, and private individuals. First priority will be given to filling these requests.

Only limited quantities will be printed at any time in order that essential additions and deletions can be made with minimum delay.

Distribution to the public will be made by the Department of Public Works, the Division of Highways, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Parks and Recreation, other state agencies and selected service and civic groups.

Ferraro Slates Address About City's Future

City Manager Edward J. Ferraro will address members of the Torrance Chamber of Commerce Monday, Jan. 17, at the chamber's monthly membership luncheon.

The meeting will be held at the Jump 'n Jack Restaurant, 2900 Pacific Coast Hwy. Reservations may be made at the chamber office or by calling Charles T. Cederlof, chairman of the meeting.

Ferraro's topic will be "Projections for the Future Development of Torrance."

The March of Dimes goal is — to secure for every baby the best chance for normal development from the moment of conception — this has been the profound concern of the March of Dimes since it launched the fight against birth defects.
