

Need for Police Courage Stressed by Mayor Yorty

"In a day when law enforcement is more difficult than at any time in history, unwavering conviction and courage are of prime importance," Mayor Sam Yorty declared, following a tribute to Los Angeles Police Chief William H. Parker.

Of the 13 police officers killed in the line of duty in parole, Los Angeles, 8 were murdered by convicts on active sentences, he added.

As the keynote speaker of the "Headliner of the Year" award banquet at the Blitmore Hotel, sponsored by the Greater Los Angeles Press Club, Yorty lauded Chief Parker for his strength and courage in fighting crime.

A Democratic candidate for Governor, Yorty is making law enforcement a prime issue in his campaign because of "the startling increase in crime in California partially caused by momentous decisions by the State Supreme Court reversing convictions of criminals on technicalities, and by political judicial appointments."

In one of his special reports on law enforcement problems, Yorty pointed out that since 1952, attacks on Los Angeles police officers have increased 284 per cent, with almost similar increases indicated in all other large cities.

"There are other factors which the police officers must accept in the course of protecting the public," Yorty said in his report. "Verbal abuse is a fact. Citizen apathy is a fact. Citizens 'not wanting to get involved' is a fact."

"Unrealistic paroles of convicted criminals are a fact."
