Space Chief to Speak At 'Heart' Luncheon

Guests at the 16th annual meeting luncheon of the Los Angeles County Heart Association will hear the facts on how research in America's new frontier—space—is helping to defeat the heart problems of man.

Heart workers and friends in the Torrance-Walteria areas are invited to hear Dr. Lawrence E. Lamb, chief of Aerospace Medical Sciences Division, Brooks Air Force Base, who will speak on "Space Flight—Profits for Heart" at the Statler Hilton Hotel, Los Angeles, May 26.

In the Golden State Room at the Hotel, the space-age medical man will provide an inside look at the actions and reactions of the hearts of astronauts and how this information has aided heart research.

HIGHLIGHTING the luncheon will be the county-wide award "county-down" program for many heart volunteers and friends who brought the heart cause to the Torrance-Walteria areas and gave their time and efforts in the successful Heart Fund Drive last February. Special awards will be presented to heart workers "who have worked beyond the call of duty in promoting the heart cause," explained Mrs. Belva Brase, 2435 1/2 Border Ave., Torrance, Heart Sunday community chairman.

Especially cited, she explained, will be a Southwestern Branch heart volunteer who has been most responsible for the development and progress of the branch.

Climaxing the "Heart Space Probe" program will be the election of the president and the board of directors of the Los Angeles County Heart Association.

Other awards for branch volunteers will be presented by the Southwestern Branch at their own meeting in June, Mrs. Brase added.
