ECC Students Join 'Men at Top' Series

Student executives representing El Camino College will meet the nation's top executives on color television this summer.

Participating in the series "Men at the Top," eight El Camino students will join outstanding high school and college students in conducting televised interviews with men whose success stories answer the question, "How did the men at the top make it there?"

Working closely with the production of the program, a pilot showing of which appeared on Channel 4-KNBC in color on April 18, is Michael Vance, president of the Young Executives' Corp. Vance, once active in the clergy, has presented inspirational addresses before hundreds of youth and service organizations.

"Men at the Top" will feature a top executive and four students in each presentation. Each program will feature one high school and three college students. El Camino will be the only two-year college represented on the series.

Slated to be initiated in July, the panel-type program will feature executives and students representing educational centers of New York and California.

In preparation for the series, the eight El Camino students to participate are currently involved in the process of meeting and interviewing executives in their offices.

El Camino participants will be representative of the Associated Students. They are Tim Irvin, Inglewood, president of the Associated Students; Miss Judy Jones, Torrance, commissioner of public relations; Craig Thompson, Torrance, first associate justice of the student court; Mike Cornner, Redondo Beach, sophomore class president, Doug Anderson, Inglewood, president of Phi Sigma Upsilon fraternity; Miss Maureen Sullivan, Inglewood, AS secretary, and Ray Barthel, Manhattan Beach, chief justice.
