...Let's Go

By LARRY MACARAY

TOKYO — It is new, it is old, and somehow it seems ageless—especially in tradition. This is a land revisited for me, as it will be 20 years in October that I briefly visited Japan. Where those circumstances were anything but pleasant, the arrangements today are almost the "lap of luxury."

Our flight to San Francisco took only 50 minutes, while our BOAC flight to Honolulu took four hours. We stayed at the Hilton Hawaiian Village where my main task was to round up ten people of my eager tour group. Eighteen of us finally boarded the long flight to Tokyo—eight hours in the air plus the loss of a day by crossing the International Date Line.

Being a "Hilton Holidays" tour that I am conducting, naturally we are staying at the new Tokyo Hilton Hotel. Kenichi Yamaguchi, the very efficient tour coordinator for the hotel, has been most helpful in making our stay a pleasant one. Luckily our guide for our entire stay of one week in Japan is Yashima Kauko, just about the smallest and cleverest guide anywhere.

TEN MILLION people live in Tokyo. The shops stay open until 8:30 p.m. to give many office workers time to shop after work. The downtown area is a madhouse. Buildings are going up everywhere, and now the ten-story limit on buildings has been eliminated, so they are going higher. Some things are inexpensive and many others are "out of sight." Items such as pearls are relatively inexpensive in Tokyo but liquor, film, cigarettes, and other items that are everyday things to us take on a new value here. They are very expensive. An ordinary bottle of Japanese beer is 75 cents and a drink of Scotch is more than twice that figure.

ON MY FIRST trip to Italy, I became convinced that surely the Italians were without a doubt the wildest and most insane drivers of all the world.

Then I went to Mexico and there I learned that if the Italians had to have driver's licenses... well, the Mexicans could never pass the test. No one could outdo the Mexicans in their recklessness with the automobile.

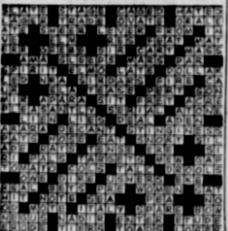

Now that I've driven in Tokyo (on the left side), I'm sure they would take all the prizes for out-and-out disregard for their own safety and for the safety of anyone else. You must experience it to believe it.

THE GINZA district has long been famous for its shopping attractions. It is called the Fifth Avenue of Tokyo and rightly so because some of the finest shops in Tokyo are located here. One of my first acts here was to go to the Yoseido Art Gallery and see the owner, Yuji Abe, to look over his fine stock of graphics by the best artists in Japan.

On my way back to the hotel, I couldn't help but notice the many little bars along the small side streets in the Ginza. They say there are more than 1,000 bars in this district—but most of them looked like "clip-joints" complete with shills at each entrance using every angle to get you inside.

ALTHOUGH THE Japanese stock market has fallen a great deal in the past year, signs of strong economic growth are everywhere. More and more Japanese are adopting our Western ways such as dress, social freedoms, and ideas. They are more avid baseball fans than the Americans, and tonight I saw Japanese wrestling on television—a tag-team match. It was even a little more faked than ours. Or is that possible?

New commander of the Los Alamitos Marine Air Reserve Training Detachment is Lt. Col. Paul Noel Jr., who replaced Col. Albert L. Clark in formal ceremonies June 18. Col. Clark was assigned to the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

was selected for duty with the Royal Air Force for night fighter training.

His military career has included assignments in England during World War II, and serving as a night fighter instructor in the U.S. and Peiping, China. He returned to the Far East at the beginning of hostilities in Korea.

STATESIDE TOURS of duty have included two years as an air intelligence analyst with the Office of Naval Intelligence, Naval post graduate study at Stanford University, and service as the Navy regional airspace officer, Western Region, Federal Aviation Agency, Los Angeles.

CATCH YOUR BREATH
Attention, mountain climbers: your heart needs a few days to compensate for the lower oxygen content of the thin air at high altitudes, before it can meet the additional demands of muscular activity, the Los Angeles County Heart Association cautions.

The board of directors of Standard Brands Paint Co. has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 9 cents a share, payable Aug. 5, 1965, to shareholders of record July 15, 1965. This is the ninth consecutive quarterly dividend paid by the company.
