TO TAHITI? . . . It's only a gag photo arranged by Harry Scott, vice-president of Van Camp Insurance, during his recent vacation tour of the South Seas. Scott says, however, he thinks Tahiti would be a logical step in Van Camp's continuing expansion program throughout Southern California (offices now in San Pedro, Los Angeles, Torrance, Santa Ana, San Diego). Insurance expert Scott points out that the photo itself is evidence many South Sea natives could use "fuller coverage."

Hearing on New Lights Set

The Torrance City Council has set July 27 for a public hearing on the formation of a new street lighting district in the city.

The new district, to be known as Street Lighting District No. 10, includes all petitions by residents for street lights and all new tracts which were completed between April 1, 1964, and April 1, 1965.

Average cost of the yearly assessment for residential property owners will be $8 per 50-foot lot, according to current plans.

Nine other street light districts have been formed in the city during recent years.
