

Federal Agency to Apply Sanctions Against LSD

By ALPHONZO BELL
Congressman, 28th District
According to Time, an estimated 10,000 students in the University of California system have tried LSD. The problem is of such magnitude that the state Attorney General has called for conferences with university officials, medical personnel, and law enforcement officers. Students seeking the "trip" provided by a minute dosage of LSD and similar "consciousness-expanding" agents are not only from colleges and universities: In California at least use of LSD has struck preparatory and public high schools.

Hard-core narcotics — opium, heroin, cocaine, morphine — still present a major problem to law-enforcement officials and to those who fall victim either to addiction or to the crimes committed by addicts. But drugs called hallucinogens, such as LSD, present a new and growing threat to public health and safety. Although nonaddictive in a physiological sense, the hallucinogens can be more harmful than "conventional" narcotics.
Use of these drugs, particularly of LSD, among students and campus fringe-groups has increased alarmingly both in large, cosmopolitan universities and in small liberal arts schools. Some areas even have cults of users.

severe emotional illness through suicide or permanent psychosis. Impaired perception can make a user believe he is able to fly or to walk into speeding traffic with impunity. People who have had personal experience with LSD find it impossible precisely to describe the world they have entered.
But whatever the unknown world may be, it is vivid and often terrifying. It is usually an eight-hour venture into nightmare-like exploding colors and strange shapes and bizarrely distorted reality. What users see in themselves and their surroundings often throws them into states of terror or of violence and necessitates their going or being taken to psychiatric clinics. Renewed hallucinatory states may recur months after the initial reaction.

I believe LSD can be obtained too easily. It can be concocted by student chemists in college or high school laboratories. A drop of it can be put into a sugar cube and sold for $5. Ready availability of the drug partially accounts for its rapid spread.

FULL SANCTIONS for illegal sale and manufacture of LSD will be imposed in mid-May by the Food and Drug Administration. Considering the consequences to drug users and to those who may come into contact with them, the legal penalties seem light. The maximum sentence for repeated offenders can be no more than six years imprisonment with a possible fine of not more than $15,000. Special

Film of Old California To Be Shown

Ron Abajian, assistant director of community relations for Title Insurance and Trust Company, Los Angeles, will present the company's new motion picture before the Thursday meeting of the Torrance Junior Chamber of Commerce Doug Hedde, president announced today.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Palms Hedde stated.

The motion picture, entitled "Heritage," is a creative color film, describing California's program to preserve its historic sites and buildings. This film was recently produced by the California Division of Beaches and Park and Office of Architecture and Construction of the State of California. It is presented as a public service by Title Insurance and Trust Co.

Seaman Recruit Louis A. Green, USN, son of Mrs. F. B. Smith of 3842 W. 178th Court, is undergoing seven weeks of basic training at the Naval Training Center here.

Under the supervision of veteran Navy petty officers, he is receiving instructions in naval history and organization, customs and courtesies, ordnance and gunnery, seamanship, damage control, first aid, swimming and survival, shipboard drills and sentry duty.

MANY DEVOTEES of the current LSD fad simply do not understand the personal consequences of the use of LSD. Disorientation from small doses can have results ranging from temporary but
