

Realtor's Position On Proposition 14

By FRED L. FREDERICKS
Because of the recent decision by the state's high court nullifying Proposition 14, the California Real Estate Association...

tion, known popularly as CREA, must either accept the court's decision, or attack the Rumford Act from a different angle.

In a recent letter Realtors received from CREA President, Burt Smith, he said, "I want to emphasize that we are acting now to petition for a rehearing before the State Supreme Court."

"In all probability this will be followed by a petition to the United States Supreme Court for review. In the meantime, in spite of conflicting reports in the press by various state officials we urge you to consider the Rumford Act back in full force and effect."

"We are now taking under consideration further action we might take to reassert the will of the people, preserving their freedom of choice in selling or renting their private property. As soon as we have something further to report we will notify you at once."

Needless to say, it's extremely hard for the average person to understand how the courts can reverse a decision which the people of California made by a 2 to 1 vote.

I have always been under the erroneous thinking that a mandate of the people by an initiative on the ballot was the will of the people and could not be set aside by the courts or the government, only by the people themselves.

When the Rumford Act was passed, CREA could have attacked the act through the courts, however, they chose to hear from the people. The cost of this approval is overwhelming, but the people were heard.

With the extremely liberal U.S. Supreme Court, I question the possibility of a reversal of the California Supreme Court decision.

It appears that many attorneys believe the Rumford Act itself would be declared unconstitutional. We'll see.

CREA has not fought so vigorously, "only to abandon the ship" to quote John Paul Jones, "we have not yet begun to fight." It appears we have lost a battle, but not the war.

Minority groups have been offended by CREA's position with claims of bigotry, and other undeserving remarks. As a past president of a local board of Realtors and a state director during the time the

Better Foods Offering Weekend For Shoppers in San Francisco

Twenty Better Food Market shoppers will be flying on PSA jets to San Francisco for exciting weekend holidays this summer, with their transportation, accommodations at the smart, new Jack Tar Hotel, and use of a new automobile provided by the local food chain. This announcement was made by Better Food officials in their big newspaper advertisement in this newspaper.

Every visitor to Better Food Markets can participate in the "San Francisco Sweepstakes" conducted by the firm, since no purchase is required. The holidays to be given include three days and two nights in the City by the Bay, in which winners may tour Chinatown, charming Fisherman's Wharf, glamorous Nob Hill, and all of the exciting tourist attractions offered there.
