

Hunt for Ranchero Queen Under Way

Publicity Chief at El Camino Assigned

Donald W. Brown, instructor in journalism and photography at El Camino College for the past five years, will serve the college as coordinator of public information, following appointment by the Board of Trustees.

Since joining the El Camino staff in 1961, Brown has been closely identified with the public information office, supplying photographic needs for that area as a part of his staff assignment. In addition, he served as adviser of the college news magazine, Warrior-Life, which was developed in its present award-winning format under his direction.

In the fall of 1962, the new coordinator served as adviser to the college weekly newspaper, the Warwhoop, which won All-American recognition from the Associated Collegiate Press under his instruction.

BROWN attended Orange Coast College prior to enrollment in the University of Southern California, where he received the bachelor of arts degree in 1952. He attended Occidental College, earned his general secondary teaching credential at San Jose State College and completed requirements for the master of arts degree and the secondary administration credential at California State College in Long Beach.

Prior to joining the El Camino College staff, Brown served as photographer, reporter, and city editor of the Orange Daily News; news editor of the East Los Angeles Tribune; and editor of the Monterey Park Californian. He was a teacher of journalism at Fullerton Union High School and journalism teacher and head of the public relations office in the Orange Unified School District.

In 1962, Brown was elected state president of the Journalism Association of Junior Colleges at the organization's convention in Sacramento. More recently, he has served as national president of the junior college honor fraternity in journalism, Beta Phi Gamma. He currently serves as committee chairman of that organization's national convention, scheduled to be held at the Plush Horse Inn, Redondo Beach, in November.

Brown also holds membership in Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity. He has been an active participant in activities of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association in conjunction with his journalistic work at El Camino.

A RESIDENT of San Pedro, Brown is active in church and youth work, assuming a leadership role in the Young Men's Christian Association group in that area.

Brown and his wife, Andrea, live at 1734 Roseglenn Ave. with their three children, Don, 8; Jody, 6; and David, 1. Both parents are former residents of Orange, and both attended Orange Union High School.

As an officer in the US Navy, Brown saw service in Hawaii, Japan, Hongkong, Trinidad, and Panama as well as the US mainland.

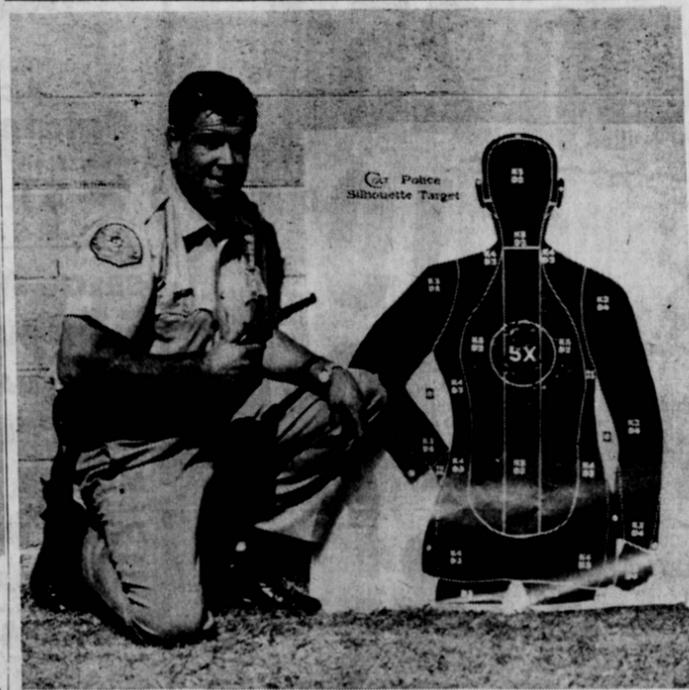

As a part of his assignment in public information, Brown will instruct the college press bureau class. In his new capacity, the coordinator will work in the division of communications in association with Dr. H. Lee Swanson, dean of that division.

He Gains Training As Cadet Engineer

Torrance resident William F. Steinwachs, a student at the University of California, Santa Barbara, is spending his summer months as a cadet engineer on a technical staff of Southern Counties Gas Co. in Monterey Park.

WILLIAM STEINWACHS
Earns Summer Experience

and Mrs. W. L. Steinwachs, 5320 Sharynne Lane, is an electrical engineering major at UCSB and will be a senior this fall.

Young Steinwachs is among 19 students from 10 southern California universities and colleges who are employed this summer by Southern Counties as part of the utility company's regular program enabling students to "earn while they learn" how to fit their college-trained skills into the world of technology and industry.

The program, which Southern Counties has developed during several years in practice, not only helps the gas company in its broader effort of recruiting talented college-trained young people, but also gives the student a chance, while still in school, to find out how his studies are put into practice in the business world.

During his summer employment with Southern Counties, Steinwachs is working on a special research project for the firm's general shops staff.

Dick Relph To Address Area Club

Author-lecturer Dick Relph, whose book "Shortcut to Success" has just been published, will be the featured speaker at Friday's meeting of the Southwest Manuscripters.

The meeting is scheduled at Clark Stadium, Hermosa Beach, at 8 p.m.

Relph, a former teacher of the Dale Carnegie methods for successful living, will speak on "Shortcut to Successful Writing." He will demonstrate how points in his new book apply to the creative processes, particularly writing.

THERE IS no charge for the meeting. It is open to the public and an informal coffee hour will follow the program.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Carrie Blanchard, 373-1716, or Dorothy Conley, 833-3182.

Southwest Manuscripters is a non-profit membership club for both professional and beginning writers. It was organized in 1949.

Sponsors Seek Candidates for Rodeo Royalty

The hunt is on to find the queen to reign over the annual Torrance Ranchero Days Rodeo, scheduled for the weekend of Aug. 13 and 14.

Contestants began to sign in with the Chamber of Commerce this week and may continue to sign during the coming weeks.

"Queen contestants signing up late will start out with a handicap," Edwin Sullivan of the Chamber of Commerce warned. Inasmuch as the selection of a queen will depend on ticket sales, the earlier the start the better for the contestant, he pointed out.

ALREADY in the race are Gayle Hegarty, 16-year-old West High student; Peggy Martin, 17, Narbonne High; Janice Lasseigne, 17, Lawndale High; and Debbie Muench, 18.

Spurring on the candidates is Deitre Risler, 18, who wore the crown at last year's Ranchero Days event.

The 1966 rodeo, sponsored jointly by the Torrance Mounted Police, the Torrance Elks Lodge, and the Chamber of Commerce, will be held at the Del Amo Center grounds and will again feature a top selection of riders and stock.

COCHAIRMAN for the queen contest are Art Harkness, representing the Torrance Mounted Police; and Bob Lydon, representing the Torrance Elks.

General chairmen for Ranchero Days will be Gus Cochran for the Mounted Police and Ozzie Grimes for the Elks.

Winner of the queen contest will ride in the Grand Entry parade each day of the rodeo, which will begin at 2 p.m. The queen will receive a complete western costume as her major prize.

A grand prize among participants will be an eight-day round trip by jet for two to Mexico City or Honolulu. Harkness and Lydon emphasized.

CLUBS OR business firms are being asked to contact the Chamber of Commerce about sponsorship of a contestant.

The queen will be chosen at 4 p.m. Aug. 5 although tickets for the grand prize will continue to be sold until the afternoon of Aug. 14, the chairmen reported.

License Fees

City Gets $186,000 In Funds

More than $40 million in state motor vehicle license fees has been paid to California's cities and counties, State Controller Alan Cranston announced today.

Cranston said the $40 million represents the third payment of motor vehicle license fees to cities and counties. The money is allocated in three payments annually.

Torrance received $186,641.40 in June, bringing the total apportionment to $794,000. The city received more than $600,000 in April, when half the funds were distributed to cities and counties.

A payment of $7.3 million was made to Los Angeles County, bringing the total share to $29.6 million, Cranston said.

The money may be used by cities and counties for general public purposes. The vehicle license fees take the place of property taxes on vehicles.

Apportionment of the funds is based on population. Torrance now has a population of 139,000 for purposes of allocating state funds.

Lomita received $25,619.84 in June, bringing to $108,999 the total allocation for the year. Redondo Beach got an additional $116,972.46 in June, for a total of nearly $336,000 for the year.

Ann Landers Says

Keep Family Spats Off Business Phone

Dear Ann Landers: I work for a large organization and all telephone calls go through the switchboard, with the exception of the executives' private lines, which, of course, I cannot use.

My husband telephoned me this morning and I knew at once he was bombed and calling from a bar. It is Jack's habit to telephone and pick a fight when he knows he's in the doghouse—which he certainly was, because he didn't come home last night.

I lost my temper and used some rather salty language. Jack said some things he shouldn't have said and it was not a conversation you'd want an outsider to hear.

As I was leaving the office for lunch, I encountered one of the telephone operators. She gave me a wise-apple smirk and asked, "And how are things at YOUR house?" I felt like strangling her.

Should I write an anonymous letter to the personnel manager about this snoop? If she listens in on my conversations she undoubtedly listens in on others. Your advice is wanted — INVADERS PRIVACY

Dear I.P.: Most telephone operators have very little interest in and even less time to tune in on family fights. The woman's greeting was probably an unfortunate coincidence: In the future make it a rule never to discuss private business on the phone and then you won't need to worry about eavesdroppers.

Dear Ann Landers: Please, please, please—let me know how a man can tell a woman that he is in love with her, ask her to marry him, let her clue in family and friends, make all sorts of plans, and then change his mind? If he was only infatuated why would he propose marriage?

This happened to me and I am so humiliated I can't hold up my head. My friends tell me that my former fiance loves me but he is afraid of the responsibility of marriage. They say I should be patient and wait, and that he will come back.

What I need to know is how long should I wait? It has been eight months and I have not heard one word from him.

Am I being a silly romantic to believe that true love can overcome any obstacle? —LEIGH

Dear Leigh: You are right. TRUE love can overcome any obstacle, but from your account of the way the young man has treated you, I would doubt that this is true love.

I suspect your friends are trying to be kind, but I don't think it's an act of kindness to give you false hope. If you have not heard from your ex-love in eight months I suggest you write him off and make new friends.

Dear Ann Landers: Please give us the answer to a question that is bothering us. Our daughter is 17. At first we thought she was just putting on weight. Now we know she is pregnant.

Last week she told us she and her boy friend wants to get married because he may be called into the service soon. He is 21. What kind of a wedding should a pregnant girl have? —NO NAME PLEASE

Dear No Name: A quick one—with as little hoopla as possible.

Confidential to NEED A WISER HEAD THAN MINE: There's nothing wrong with your head, my dear. Your letter was an extremely good one. Those "friends" are giving you a bum steer. I've never heard of such "biblical advice." It may be a little late for you to "go forth and multiply" but a marriage that offers companionship in the evening of your lives makes a great deal of sense. Good luck, and God bless you.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the booby traps of teen-age drinking, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teenage Drinking," enclosing your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

COUNT MARCO

Ladies in the Gaming Halls

Once a famous beauty was refused admission to the exclusive Monte Carlo casino when she appeared wearing a custom-designed slacks suit for which she had the figure.

But fashionable Europe insists that its women dress like the smart women they are. No exceptions. Here in America, men of the last three generations rarely see an elegantly dressed woman, and therefore expect all of you to fall into the same sort of pattern—a pit of slovenliness.

The only well-dressed women I saw recently in Reno were mistresses. They wore big diamonds but no wedding bands. The rest of you were Western-type wives, sloppily dressed and intent only on playing the slot machines.

Unlike the elegant gaming salons of the Riviera, Cannes, Monte Carlo or Wiesbaden, Reno has a saloon flavor all its own, one which leaves a bad taste in any man's mouth. It is crawling with women, talking in loud nasal voices, wearing shorts and with their hair up in curlers.

No wonder your men lose so much money gambling. They can't stand to look up from the tables of chance and see the mistakes they made in marrying you.

Because your gaming halls are in the Wild West is no excuse to forget you're a female. Certainly the few exciting women I saw there were not out of place.

And no one could mistake the envy in the eyes of bored, dull-eyed husbands who licked their lips and whose eyes lit up like lights on double jackpots as the few beauties passed by on the arms of other men.

As on the Continent, part of the joy of gambling is having beautiful feminine ornaments around.

For your next trip, invest in a few sensational gowns and get your hair done. This might be inspiration enough for him to be lucky.

And what better jackpot to take home when it's all over than you, instead of some old pot that he'd like to throw away or dump along the road? Good luck!
