Aerospace Workers Minority in State

Nearly twice as many people work in hospitals as in hotels in California. For every three people working in automobile plants two are working in automobile repair shops. Cooks, waiters, bartenders, and other employees of eating and drinking places outnumber all other occupations in the state.

The entire complex of manufacturing industries comprising aerospace—aircraft, missiles, and electronics—accounts for only about 10 per cent of all persons engaged in non-agricultural employment.

And, despite the giant strides made by manufacturing in California in recent decades, less than one in three non-agricultural employees works in a manufacturing business.

These and other interesting facts emerge from a statistical study of employment and business activities in California released today by Crocker-Citizens National Bank in a booklet called "A Quick Look at the Business Market in California."

One of a series issued from time to time by the bank, the booklet is based on the latest available reports of the United States Department of Commerce. It was prepared by Wilbur McCann, economic consultant.

It gives California employment statistics for 19 manufacturing categories—from apparel to transportation equipment—and for 14 non-manufacturing categories—from amusement and recreation to wholesale trade. It also shows how those statistics compare with regional and national totals. The statistics do not cover farm workers, the self-employed, government employees, and those employed by railroads and on ocean-going vessels.

THE SPECIFIC figures for manufacturing in California, as of March 30, 1964, were 1,369,912, which represented 67.5 per cent of the manufacturing employment in the 13 Western states and 8.1 per cent of the national total.

Non-manufacturing employment in California totaled 3,006,992, as of March 30, 1964, which equaled 58.9 per cent of the total in the Western states and 10.5 per cent of the national total.

The booklet shows that almost 90 per cent of the 331,568 businesses in California—including manufacturing and non-manufacturing—employed fewer than 20 people; and that less than 1,800 businesses in the state employed more than 250 people.

A CHART shows that more people are employed in California than in all the other states combined in the manufacture of wines and brandy, 63 per cent; motion picture production and distribution, 55 per cent; and ordinance and accessory manufacturing (missiles) 52 per cent.

In addition, substantial percentages of national totals are employed in California in motion picture service industries; 41 per cent; cured and canned seafood manufacturing, 35 per cent; research and testing laboratories, 27 per cent; and aircraft and parts manufacturing, 25 per cent.

The booklet is available upon request at any of the 262 Crocker-Citizens offices throughout California.
