New member of the marketing staff of Del Amo Center is Jerry Hay. The first segment of the $30 million center, a 200-acre residential, financial and commercial complex, is now under construction at the northwest corner of Hawthorne Boulevard and Carson Street.

A resident of Palos Verdes Peninsula, Hay is a graduate of San Diego State College and attended the University of Paris.

Californians Not Heaviest Drinkers

Californians apparently are not living up to their reputation as heavy drinkers, despite the fact that the state leads the nation in the total amount of liquor consumed, according to a special economics report prepared by Bank of America.

The total amount of distilled spirits consumed in California is the highest of any state in the nation, according to the bank's "Outlook for Distilled Spirits" report, but Californians rank only 10th among other states in per capita consumption.

The average Californian consumed only about 2 gallons of distilled spirits during 1965, well above the national average of 1.53 gallons, but not as much as Nevada, where tourism may have helped account for the average 3.84 gallons; Alaskans averaged 2.88 gallons, and New Hampshire residents averaged 2.86 gallons.

NATIONALLY, the Bank of America report estimates that total consumption will increase to a record high of 310 million gallons, up 5 percent from 1965's total of 293 million.

Most of this increase, however, will be from imported and "light" spirits rather than the more traditional American whiskeys, the report points out.

Bourbons and blends, it estimates, will for the first time account for less than half of all distilled spirits consumed in the United States, a trend that started several years ago.

An increasing share of the market will be taken over by imported Scotch and Canadian whiskey, and by "white" spirits: gin and vodka.

THIS TREND, the report states, reflects the preferences of increasing numbers of youthful drinkers who seek a "light" taste in their liquor. In addition, it estimates, the large number of young, inexperienced drinkers is likely to bring about a sizeable increase in the sale of bottled cocktails.

Viet Nam, Riots Draw Heavy Mail

The war in Viet Nam continues to draw heavy mail to his offices, Congressman Alphonzo Bell (R-28th District) has announced.

Bell said recent riots in the nation's cities drew the heaviest mail to his office during September, but reported Viet Nam continues to concern his constituents.

The ten subjects mentioned most frequently by constituents include:

- Express concern about the recent riots in U. S. cities.
- Express concern about the war in South Viet Nam.
- Support present conduct of the war in South Viet Nam.
- Criticize poor administration of the anti-poverty program.
- Oppose a future increase in the federal income tax.
- Express concern about the rising crime rate in the nation.
- Express support for "truth in packaging" legislation.
- Support federal aid to elementary and secondary education.
- Express concern about continuing inflation and rising prices.
- Urge the passage of firearms control legislation.

Piano Recital Set Tuesday at Camino

A piano recital will be presented by Lazlo Lak in the recital hall at El Camino College Tuesday at 11 a.m. Selections will include Bartok's "Sonata for Piano, 1962"; and Kolday's "Seven Pieces, 1917-1918." Admission is without charge.

Vodka, which was practically unknown in the United States 15 years ago, probably will overtake gin in popularity during 1966, the Bank of America report predicts.

PRICE CHANGES also can be expected in many states, partly as the result of a recently enforced New York State law which requires distillers to affirm that their wholesale bottle and case prices of each brand are as low in New York as anywhere in the country. Because of the importance of the New York market, the result is expected to be identical pricing scale throughout the United States. So far, some wholesale prices in New York have been reduced, while in other states prices have increased.

"The effect of the New York law on California prices is presently under study as distillers review their wholesale prices," the report states. "No conclusions as to price movements have yet been reached."
