SAN FRANCISCO — They are sporty enough for a woman to get by on cocktail dresses. (So the woman at the next table will be in formal gown and you'll hate me.) For men, the linen jacket that can be used days, too. Dress it up with dark trousers and a dark bow tie.

The "Canberra" trip above is a long voyage. Also it's a British ship — note the colored jackets only on Americans. On the nine-day Caribbean cruises, you don't need as much clothing. And you'll see plenty of colored jackets.

"... buying cigarettes in Europe where I understand they are expensive."

Like gold. England, 75 cents a package for American brands. France and Italy, about 50 cents. I've paid a dollar in Greece.

Now — after check-in at the airport go to the free port store. You can buy duty-free, tax-free cigarettes. They will be put aboard your plane. Most countries will allow two cartons. Many countries don't even look in your luggage. But don't count on packing a big bunch though. They are delivered in a bundle on the airplane. You can't tuck them in your luggage which, by now, is in the belly of the plane.

Within Europe from country to country, you can do the same thing. They all have duty-free shops at the terminals. And you can buy cartons on the plane in flight — usually. Don't count on it though. The passengers make a run on them. If you're in the rear seats, they may run out before they get to you.

In Spain, American cigarettes are cheap. At the Government tobacco stands or the smuggled ones, sold openly — apparently the Government doesn't care. In Portugal, I bought Sintras and Estorils for 20 cents. Filter tipped and tasted just like ours.

In France, it's those choky Gauloise. But some Americans LOVE them.

"My mother is not young, and I am concerned if she should need a doctor while in Europe..."

I've had doctors a few times in Europe. But never for anything serious. No trouble getting them. American Embassy has a list. So does your airline and your hotel. They all spoke English.

In the countryside in Spain, a doctor prescribed penicillin for me. It seems Spanish doctors don't do their own needle work. They sent a man called a "practicante" to the hotel. He selected a used needle (from a pile in a tobacco tin). I swear it had a square point — he did everything but hammer it in.

If you expect anything like this, ask your doctor here to

Obedience Classes Graduate

Two novice dog obedience classes have been graduated in ceremonies conducted by the Harbor-Lite Dog Obedience Club at Peck Park, San Pedro.

Highlighting the ceremony was the awarding of trophies and ribbons to the highest scoring handlers and their dogs.

Trophy winners included Barbara Alotis of Palos Verdes, German Shepherd, 196; Glenn Gowin of Torrance, German Shepherd, 195; and Bambi Lance, 12, of Redondo Beach, German Shepherd, 189.

Young Lancer also won the junior handler trophy.

GRADUATION certificates were awarded to: Betty Kovanagh, San Pedro, Cocker-poo; Francis Warnock, San Pedro, Dachshund; Linda Ferber, Palos Verdes Peninsula, German Shepherd; John Barych Jr., Wilmington, German Shepherd; Carolyn Keith, Palos Verdes Estates, German Shepherd; Warner Cote, San Pedro, Chow; and Richard Jones, Torrance, All American.

Certificates also were given to Rebecca Brainerd, Portuguese Bend, Old English Sheepdog; Reynaldo Gomez, Wilmington, Great Dane; Betty Jacobelly, San Pedro, Poodle; Harold Short, San Pedro, Silky Terrier.

Junior handlers were Joe Keawe, San Pedro, Collie; Kathy Cooper, Palos Verdes Estates, German Shepherd; Terry Duncanson, Rolling Hills Estates and Andrea Renzelli, Palos Verdes Peninsula, Collie. Judging the class was Mrs. Pat Johnson of Santa Fe Springs.
