

Kanine Korner

By Francis X. Lohmann

A news item crossing my desk relates the happy fact that some 200 displaced Cuban dogs have been reunited with their owners in Miami Beach but they took the long route home.

The dogs whose owners were forced to flee the communistically controlled Island of Cuba were transported via air to Florida by way of Spain and New York City—a distance of 9,190 miles.

The lack of air service between Cuba and the United States mainland is to blame for the route about passage.

Apparently none of the dogs have suffered greatly from their exposure to the jet set, jet airliner set, that is — and they didn't have a baggage problem. All they had to bring were their faithful and loving hearts.

Bravos to the Morris Animal Foundation of Denver, Colo. for their around-the-clock investigation and research — research in behalf of dogs, that is, at Purdue University's School of Veterinary Science and medicine.

At the moment, the learned scientific, humanely thinking gentlemen are working to find a cure for one of the commonly occurring, yet puzzling skin and coat diseases of dogs known as demodectic mange. Demodectic mange is associated with a microscopic mite which thrives around the hair roots in the skin and occurs mostly in young dogs and is virtually non-existent in dogs over three years of age. This reporter joins all dogdom in a king sized, 21 bark salute to the Morris Animal Foundation of Denver, Colo.

TALES FROM DOGDOM:— Kennel Club of Beverly Hills opens the 1967 "dog show season" with their stella one day unbenched canine event, Sunday, at the Sports Arena in Los Angeles. Many breeds of dog will be on display throughout the day. Go see! Don't miss it! . . . St. Bernard owners and fanciers now boast their own specialty club in the newly formed St. Bernard Club of California. Membership is open to everyone who covets these magnificent dogs. According to Gracie Rucker, the club's publicity lass, first officially sponsored activity will be the St. Bernard fun match at Reseda Park on Jan. 22. much you may care for his dog's about 250 degrees . . . To the many lucrative canine services we can now add massages. No kidding! Famous masseur and ex fight champ Packy O'Gatty who often massages Hollywood glamour gals recently took on several bow wow clients. Packy claims the doggies pay him off with affectionate barks. He believes that dog massaging could open up a brand new industry and agree . . . Man's visual field is about 180 degrees; the dog's about 250 degrees . . . In 1895 the Kennel Club of England ruled that no dog with cropped ears could be eligible for entry at a dog show.
