Kinyon headed Torrance Works from 1960 to 1963. He then became general superintendent of U. S. Bowser Brownings: The deeply mourned astronaut, Gus Grisson, was an avid dog lover. His favorite breed? The Basset Hound! He owned one named Sam. Following the Westminster Kennel Club all breed dog show at New York City's Madison Square Garden, my good friend George Payton hangs up his professional dog handling leash in lieu of dog judging.

George has for many years been a guiding light in the ranks of canine jockeys as I know he'll be when he joins the ranks of AKC licensed dog judges. The professional handlers' loss will be the fraternity of judges' gain. God speed to a wonderful human being.

HERE'S A NOTE of caution for owners of Old English Sheepdogs and other shaggy

Setter... Should ever a committee be appointed to try to decide which is the most picturesque of all breeds, one of the final choices, if not the final, would certainly be the Irish Setter. The late Walt Disney echoed these identical sentiments many times via the airwaves.

The dashing Irishmar has remarkable beauty of color and coat, a most graceful carriage and his gait has style and dash. Of all the purebred dogs introduced into America from overseas, few are as like the people of their native lands as this handsome Dan from Eire.

The Irish Setter is believed to be descended from the parti-Cocker Spaniels, which came to Ireland from France. The Irish Setter's temperament is as likable as his appearance, for he is as high-spirited, as bold, as carefree as a St. Patrick's Day Parade. His truly Irish warm-heartedness endears him to countless thousands of dog lovers.

The Irish Setter is a slender dog, deep-bodied and strong. The head is lean and long, muzzle deep and square, ears set low and hanging close. The eyes are hazel or brown. The coat is fairly short and fine, but longer on the ears, chest and under-body, legs and outstretched tail. He tips the scales at about 55 pounds and in height 25 inches. The Irish Setter Club of Southern California is one of the greatest forces in this area for spreading Irish Setters.
