

Chace Praises Law On Anti-Alcoholism

County Supervisor Burton W. Chace today hailed State approval of funds to continue the operation of local anti-alcoholism centers as a vital step in the battle against the disease.

A bill providing $1 million for the program, sponsored by Senator J. Eugene McAteer (D-San Francisco), cleared the legislature without dissent. Governor Ronald Reagan has signed the measure into law.

"This program has saved 6,000 persons from becoming permanent alcoholics," Chace said. "The measure recently approved provides enough state and federal funds to continue this work through June."

THE EXTENSION of the program into fiscal 1967-68 will be considered this spring by the State Legislature. Emergency legislation was necessary to carry the program through June.

The funds provided by the measure are used to maintain local centers, where alcoholics may seek help.

In Chace's Fourth Supervisorial District, there is a center at the Long Beach Health Department, 2655 Pine Ave., Long Beach. A downtown Los Angeles center is at 111 East First St., Room G28.

WHILE THIS program is being handled on a state level, the County of Los Angeles is doing much work in the field of alcoholism, Chace pointed out.

Recently the Board of Supervisors released a booklet, "Alcoholism — Everybody's Problem." The 24-page, illustrated publication describes the symptoms, characteristics and prevention methods of alcoholism.

"More than 360,000 people in Los Angeles County are in some stage of alcoholism," Chace said. "This means that 8 1/2 per cent of all County residents over age 20 have a drinking problem."

"This total rates alcoholism as one of the County's most serious health, social and police problems."

The Board of Supervisors have formed a County Commission on Alcoholism to study the problem and serve in an advisory capacity.
