

Coffee Break

By Adeline Daley

When you consider how many cans of aerosol spray and tubes of this and that we have in this household, it was only natural that someone would squish the wrong one, as my husband did the other morning when he started to apply toothpaste rather than shaving cream to his face.

I don't know how close a shave he got, but I noticed that the left side of his face has 70 per cent fewer cavities. Since we have a veritable drug store of products both in aerosol cans and other containers — this isn't the first time he's been confused. He reached for a shampoo by mistake another instance, only to discover in the nick of time that its advertising claim is: "If you have one life to live, live it as a blonde."

It was then he demanded that I remove such products from our medicine cabinet. But frankly, I don't know where I'll find the space. You name it — if you need a cream to open the pores, close the pores, cleanse the pores and revive them after a work-out, we have it. Or, I should say, my teen-aged daughters have. For, aside from the bar of Skat soap, which I bought for myself from the hardware store, I can carry my make-up needs around in a purse. Whereas my daughters need a foot-locker.

But, they're not content with the mere purchase of cosmetics. They also buy magazines — "Teen," "Glamour," "Ingenué" — whose editorial content is filled with such inspirational articles as, "You, Too, Can Have More Attractive Ear Lobes!" and "How I Got Rid of Acne and Was Elected Pom-pom Girl in Seven Days."

Their biggest concern is with their hair; understandably because there are entire magazines, such as "Hairdo," devoted to such earth-shaking stories as what to do about "Fall-out" — dandruff, that is.

Scarcely a morning goes by that I don't hear, "Mom, you don't expect me to go to school like this, do you?" After all, they haven't washed and set their hair in 24 hours.

Weeks go by that we don't see them without giant-size rollers in their hair, which they also sleep on. A feat, I think, which compares with walking over hot coals in bare feet.

I worry too, about air pollution when they start pressing the button on the hairspray can. I just wonder if that heavy condensation that hangs over our house in the morning isn't "sprog" — a mixture of fog and hair-spray.

What I find a little disconcerting is that I can get completely ready in the time it takes them to work on their eyes alone. Prestige-wise I ought to spend more time, but who's going to fix breakfast?

Of course I've tried to convince them that the best "beauty treatment" is breathing in those beneficial steam vapors from the dish pan. But to no avail. Anymore than they believe the advertising slogan I altered to read: "She's engaged! She's lovely! She uses Old Dutch Cleanser!"

Harmony Notes at Golden Sails

All roads will lead to the Golden Sails Inn in Long Beach Friday morning as Junior clubwomen from the Marina District gather for their 11th annual convention, which will be in session Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Barbara Wade, president of the Torrance Club, will head the 20 member delegation attending. "High Notes of Harmony" is the theme of the event including workshops, reports, awards presentations. Friday evening's banquet will honor Mrs. A. E. Glad, district president, and the Awards Festival and Luncheon will highlight Saturday's activities. Interpreting the theme, Mrs. Robert Vroman sails a miniature boat, while Mmes. Leon Taylor and Douglas Hedde beat the Indian drums and Mrs. John Thayer sings "Indian Love Call". (Press-Herald Photo)

All new transferees and other interested may call Joan Erickson for more information.

Pork Chops With Rich Milk Gravy

The charm of this delicious Pork Chops with Milk Gravy recipe is its ease of preparation... plus its good milk nutrition, of course. Brown as many thick pork chops as needed in a skillet that can be used in the oven. Salt and pepper lavishly. Completely cover top with corn flakes slightly crushed. Cover all with milk. Bake in moderate, 350 degree, oven for 1 hour. The corn flakes thicken the milk to make the delicious gravy-like topping, leaving excess fat in bottom of pan.

At Alondra Park

Orchid Show April 29-30

South Bay Orchid Society, Inc. in conjunction with the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation will present its seventh annual Free Orchid Show at the Alondra Park Community Building, 3535 Redondo Beach Blvd. on Saturday and Sunday, April 29 and 30.

There will be large displays by societies, individual members, and outstanding commercial growers, featuring all types of exotic orchids. This will be in addition to the individual plants entered in all classifications, table arrangements and corsages.

The theme of the show, which is open to all, is "Orchids for Amateurs." The Society welcomes any orchid enthusiast to participate by entering his plants for exhibition or ribbon judging. There will also be entries of mantle and table arrangements.

All entries must be correctly labeled and will be received at the Community Building from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Friday and from 8 a.m. until 10 a.m. on Saturday. There is no entry fee.

Naomi Minami, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Minami of Torrance, will be crowned Princess of the Show by Dan Furman of the Los Angeles Department of Parks and Recreation.

Viewing hours will be Saturday, April 29, 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday, April 30, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

A new electric oven will clean itself while you enjoy your steak.

Just set the controls when you take the steaks out. The oven will clean itself electrically. Every square inch. From top to bottom. Broiler tray and all.

Not that getting rid of such a nasty chore is the only reason to buy a new electric range.

Your appliance dealer will be glad to point out all the reasons. But a self-cleaning oven ought to be reasonable, wouldn't you say? Modernize your kitchen with a flameless electric range.
