

COLLEGE REPORT

By ROBERT M. BERSI

Assistant to the President
California State College, Dominguez Hills

In a campus which measures its size in terms of 160 students and a single building, an inevitable rapport exists between those involved in its activities. This is especially true at Dominguez Hills, one of the few colleges where the president can claim first name acquaintance with the entire student body.

In keeping with a tradition established last year, Leo F. Cain, president of the California State College, Dominguez Hills, addressed the following comments to the student body as this academic year draws rapidly to a close.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS By LEO F. CAIN

As we approach the end of our first year on the Dominguez campus, I think all of us can look with satisfaction on many accomplishments of the past year, and we can look forward to an exciting and challenging future.

At its April meeting, the board of trustees approved the total master plan design for the new campus—probably one of the most exciting master plans ever developed in the State College system. Not only is it a beautiful campus design, but it is also highly functional for both faculty and students.

THE PURCHASE of 346 acres has been completed by the State of California, and during the summer ground will be broken for our first permanent buildings. Construction of the library-administration building, a science building, a social science building, and outdoor athletic facilities will follow. A humanities-arts building, which will house our first theatre facilities, is in the preliminary planning stages.

On the academic side, two new major fields of concentration will be added in Anthropology and Latin American Studies, and thirteen new faculty members will join the teaching staff. Our student enrollment will increase, and the number of classes available to students will expand significantly.

THIS PAST year, the students at Dominguez Hills have contributed extensively to our growing academic community. Although handicapped by limited physical facilities, they have sponsored and participated in many activities, dramatic and musical events, the explorations series, films, art exhibits, lecture and symposia, picnics, the college open house, selection of a symbolic theme and college colors, and hosting students from high schools and junior colleges. Even the athletic program, although limited to ping pong and volley ball, has reflected some of the spirit of the student body.

With our campus building program in full swing next year I am sure student interest and participation in the total college program will grow. Already the new student officers and members of the Council are planning next year's work. I would hope that next year's accomplishments will include the design and approval of a college seal and the development of plans for a long-range athletic program, a student union, and a series of faculty-student seminars to discuss problems of mutual concern.

LET ME stress again that that students attending a college at its inception influence greatly its direction and nature. Now, during these formative years of the college you hold not only a position of special influence but also an opportunity to participate in the creation of a new institution of higher learning.

It is you who will continue to develop a student government and set the direction for whom we will depend to a great extent to determine the spirit of this campus. student life. It is you, both as individuals and as members of student organizations, on

Fire Losses Down for '66, Annual Report Says

Citywide fire loss for the year 1966 was held to approximately 10 per cent of the value of the property involved.

of some 100 fire boxes throughout the city, completion of a totally new communications center, and the acceptance of new fire-fighting apparatus.

This was one of the important calls, rescues, inspections, submitted to the Torrance City Council last week.

Lucas said that 13.5 per cent of the Torrance operating budget was going to the Fire Department. Further breakdown showed 88 per cent of the fire dollar expended for fire suppression, 3.7 per cent for fire prevention, and 5.2 per cent for special services division, and 3.1 per cent for administration. The Department has made more calls, rescues, inspections, speeches, and drills than ever before, Lucas said.
