By Terrence O'Flaherty

"Why does a network like NBC allow a show like 'Welcome to Japan, Mr. Bond' to be shown directly after a family program like 'Tarzan'? It was tasteless and vulgar. How can we parents criticize our children for their folly in the overemphasis on sex, brutality and drugs when adults allow programs like this in family air time?"

The so-called "show" titled "Welcome to Japan, Mr. Bond" was nothing more than a 60-minute trailer to advertise the new Bond movie and both producer Harry Saltzman and NBC should be ashamed of themselves. It was a cunning collection of lurid scenes taken from old Bond movies and selected solely for their brutality and sex appeal. Hollywood is the violence and sadism capital of the world today. It will spread until the public finally cries "Mercy, enough!"

"Will The Monkees and The Invaders be back next season?"

Yes, but not on the same show, I hope.

"What has become of Glenn Ford?"

Commander Ford has been on active duty in Vietnam. Upon his return the U. S. Naval Reserve notified him that in event of "all-out hostilities involving the United States in the Far East" he will serve as chief liaison officer between the Navy Department in Washington and the motion picture industry wherever it may be.

"We used to be required to wait so long before a feature motion picture was released for TV but just the other night we saw a movie that was made only three years ago. Are there any rules about how long a film must rest on the shelf before going on television?"

No. The time spread between the two media has narrowed to one year. The old days of first, second, and third run movies has been replaced by quick saturation and then a fast sale to TV. As a result, viewers can expect movies like these (all released in 1966 or 1965), to be shown on TV this year: "The Collector;" "The Agony and the Ecstasy;" "The Yellow Rolls Royce;" "Young Cassidy;" "The World of Henry Orient;" "How to Murder Your Wife;" "Ship of Fools;" and others. Slightly older and to be seen on TV next season are: "Tom Jones," "A Hard Days Night" and "The Pink Panther."

"Were any American show people caught in the Israel-Arab War?"

When Israel became a danger zone only three U.S. artists were preparing to entertain there: Richard Tucker, Roberta Peters and conductor Eric Leinsdorf. Tucker and Miss Peters remained, fulfilled engagements and offered to entertain troops. Leinsdorf left immediately.

"Are the major movie studios still located in Hollywood?"

Only a few of them were actually in Hollywood. Only one remains: Paramount. Small lots such as Samuel Goldwyn and old RKO, now Desilu, are turning out TV shows. Warners and Universal are in San Fernando Valley. Twentieth Century-Fox is in Beverly Hills and recently converted most of its acreage into a new community called Century City. MGM, the last hold-out in Culver City, is again contemplating the sale of its valuable property and a move of the entire studio to Conejo Valley. In rapidly growing Los Angeles the real estate has increased in value far beyond the use of the land for film making.

"Twiggy in Hollywood! Twiggy in London! Twiggy in New York! Twiggy in Vogue! Twiggy in Harpers Bazaar! Where will she pop up next—the White House?"

Well, the Latin Quarter Night Club in Tokyo has hired four "Twiggy-type" hostesses. Where can she go from there?
