Study City Government

Students and parents at Carr Elementary School are focusing attention on local government this month.

Last week 24 members of the student governing body visited a meeting of the Torrance Council. They were introduced by City Manager Edward Ferraro. Student body president Kathy Terheggen led the flag salute at the council meeting. Tonight parents will have an opportunity to update their government know-how when Ferraro visits the school as guest speaker at a PTA meeting.

Airport Meeting

Members of the city's Airport Commission will meet tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the council chambers at the Torrance City Hall, 3031 Torrance Blvd.

What lies ahead for the American family?

Family problems of the 20th and 21st Centuries will be considered in a course in "Modern Sociology" to be taught at South High School, Room G-3 Monday nights starting Jan. 29. Class time is 7 to 9:30.

Tom Rische, high school teacher and author of the Press-Herald's "Letter to My Son," will instruct the class, offered through Torrance Evening High School. The nine-week sessions, offered this year for the first time, will include discussions of such topics as:

- Are things better or worse than in the "Good old days?"
- Why do parents and youngsters have trouble communicating?
- How have families changed in recent years and where are they going?
- What will life be like in the year 2000?
- How will automation affect people?
- Is the "new morality" really new?
- Is there a "generation gap"?

Rische teaches sociology and journalism at South High School. He has worked extensively with young people in school and youth groups, and will compare adults' opinions with those of young people.

A graduate of the University of Nebraska, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kapa, he holds a master's degree from USC. He is a member of the Torrance YMCA Board of Managers and a past president of the South Bay Toastmasters.
