Show Yourself In Landscaping

Flowering trees should combine shade and beauty wherever possible. Home fruit, too, is part of the general picture of abundance. In the fall, of course, one wants foliage colors in areas where they occur most vividly. The delight of a brilliant foliage tree warms the family's heart and grows in value with the passing years.

Landscaping is not a set affair, like the Japanese Garden, or the English formal garden, but a thing of beauty which pleases the family throughout the year. People at times have rages for gardens like the Japanese, English, French, Italian or similar gardens, but this is ridiculous if one has to sacrifice his own idea of beauty for the imported idea which may not fit into the American scheme of beauty in any sense of the word. It's like wearing sandals on a rough and tumble trip into the Rocky Mountains.

"Be yourself," say the professionals, "and tie sky, earth and home together in the lovely natural way that is part of American living. Nowhere have we the potential for exciting, exquisite, natural landscaping as in the United States.
