

Snow-Covered Mountains Lure Four Million Skiers

By REYNOLDS KNIGHT

Now is the time when all good, bad and indifferent skiers head for the nation's ski slopes and trails — and this season approximately four million of them will do just that.

The call of the snow-covered mountains easily lures its willing followers because it means challenging skiing and socializing.

The number of skiers, which grows about 20 per cent a year, is being joined by uncounted thousands of others, who don't know a schuss from a stem christie. These non-skiers flock to popular resorts to soak up the atmosphere, drink hot toddies and mix with the young, fast crowd.

FOR MANY young people in New York a ski weekend begins late Friday afternoon. By car or tour bus, they head north toward the New England ski area. The season runs from mid-November to mid-April.

Their invasion of quiet New England towns and villages has caused some resentment but this has been assuaged by realization of the boon to the area's economy. All told, skiers at the 39 major ski areas in Vermont last year spent $68 million in the state, making skiing second only to tourism among Vermont's major industries.

One doctor in a small New England town perhaps summed up this winter activity best when he said, "The ski resort has been great for business." He was including the doctor business: He estimates he'll treat 75 to 100 broken limbs this year.

ONE OF the hottest items in corporate identification symbols is the new trademark adopted by Selas Corp. of America, Dresher, Pa. In fact, it's red-hot in the main part of the design and white-hot at the core.

The symbol — a fiery-colored disk, rimmed in black — reflects the company's involvement in the development design and construction of equipment that uses intense heat as a precision tool in industrial processing and production.

The bold-face letters that spell "Selas" in the new logotype were hand designed and are different from any conventional type-face constructions, according to Selas officials.

The bold-face lettering is described as an "international" style, appropriate for use in any country and "fully compatible with the worldwide scope of the company's operations." A particular feature is that it spills Selas either right-side up or upside down.

All subsidiaries and divisions of the company around the globe will use the new corporate symbol.

BITS O' BUSINESS — Homeowner costs are climbing. Increasing rates on mortgage money, taxes, insurance and rising prices for repair and maintenance work have elevated the cost of owning a home by 7.5 per cent over the 1967 mark. . . . Electric shavers had their biggest year in 1968. Increased use by women, who accounted for about 2.3 million units, played a solid role in the rise. Of course, 40 per cent of the sales came during the holiday periods.

A PIPING component for nuclear power plants that simplifies leak detection of radioactive contaminants has been designed by the Tube Turns division of Chemtron Corp., Louisville, Ky.

The fitting, called a two-ply bellows expansion joint, is part of piping penetration through the containment vessel wall. When fitted with suitable instrumentation, it permits continuing Atomic Energy Commission requirements, J. E. Chumbley Jr., division president, said.

He said that continuous surveillance facilities are being considered at most new nuclear power plants to reduce the frequency of plant-wide leakage rate tests that halt normal operations for several days.

Chumbley said the Tube-Turn fitting has a wire mesh between the two metal plates that form the bellows. The mesh prevents direct contact of the plies creating a flow area that can be monitored with simple detection devices.

He said such a fitting also has application in other industries to guard against leakage of toxic gases or expensive process materials and catalysts.

THINGS TO COME — This year the Treasury, through computerization, will be sharper than ever in peering an eye at taxpayers who may be remiss in keeping good records. . . . Vending machines already are augmenting, or have replaced, many company-subsidized cafeterias. Industry shipments of the machines, at $142 million in 1958, should rise above $338 million this year.

... Let's Go
By LARRY MACARAY

So many people do not know that American artists are setting the pace for the rest of the world in the field of art. For decades the center of the world's art had been revolving in Paris. It was taken for granted that everything that was really happening in art had to happen in Paris. Somehow the war took the creative steam out of the French and the emphasis shifted toward America.

New York took the challenge after the second world war and a new era of art began. Abstract Expressionism was a wild incoherent form of expression, born out of the frustrations and disappointments of the war. The act of painting became the important element in the entire structure of expression. What emerged from this 20-year period of slashing on canvas was a complete break from the past and a basis for future exploration.

"Pop" art emerged as an expression of contemporary industrialized, mass-production society. Its appeal is universal because it is a valid expression of a universal desire. Democracy, industrialization and commercial expansion are desires which have spread throughout the world and which find their prime expression in American society.

USING THE symbols of this society, pop art reverses the introspection of abstract expressionism, and takes a look at the harsh exterior of this world.

It is a depersonalized, anonymous and anti-sensitive look at the beauty of the commonplace and vulgar. For the pop artist there is no singular style or form for his expression. There is only the binding theme of beauty all round us.

There is no need to look within each artist to know the meaning of his work, because the theme is a common, democratic ideal for all. Pop art accepts the world, and seeks to reveal the beauties it commonly produces. It has probed the surface enough to stimulate inquiry into new possibilities of beauty and wonder beneath.

Today's big thing in art is "Op." This could be called another step-child of abstract expressionism, but it is actually an old form used to express the modern mood for sensation in life. It is designed to be experienced.

OPTICAL ART has been known for a very long time, but in recent years it has been designed deliberately to elicit a response from the optic nerve of the viewer. This is done by deliberate arrangement of form, line and color in such a manner that a stimulus is exacted from the responsive nerves of the eye. The arrangement of the painting or construction is such that some kind of movement seems to be created. This may be explosive or bursting; in-and-out effect; weaving or undulating waves; bumps or irregularities; or a sort of "exchange of positions" of lines in the painting.

There are many kinds and movements in op art, and a single artist may use more than one within a short time. Not only shape, but color helps the movement, and even adds a pulsing effect. Single and multi-dimensional projections may appear, and the eye may find itself being pulled in some odd directions while experiencing op art. It is a new way of man to look at nature and himself — and it is sure to open up avenues into even newer and more exciting forms of expression.

Progress Report on Storm Drains Filed

A quarterly report on status of the 1958 and 1964 storm drain issue programs has been received and filed by county supervisors, it was reported today by Supervisor Burton W. Chace.

The County Flood Control District compiled the rundown.

Chace said tabulations reviewed Jan. 1 indicate that plans for all regular projects included in the 1958 program have been received by the district for processing. Of these, 182 out of 184 have been advertised for bids or built.

A SIMILAR percentage of construction funds had been committed or spent on these projects.

Included in the 1958 undertaking are 71 drains authorized for funding out of savings on regular projects. Plans for 87 per cent of these have been received, 73 per cent have been advertised or constructed, and 65 per cent of the funds allocated have been committed or spent, Chace reported.

On an over-all basis, plans for 96 per cent of the regular and supplemental projects have been submitted for processing. Some 234 projects out of the 255 called for have been advertised or built.

DESIGN plans for the projects are prepared by the cities where they are to be located and by the County Engineer for unincorporated areas, Chace said.

Construction is handled by private contractors under competitive bid procedures and is supervised by Flood Control District personnel, he added.
