The Mail Ego
 By Terrance O'Flaherty

"Richard Nixon's first telecast after the election—when he introduced his cabinet—was an encouraging indication that he will use the medium wisely. Never before has a President elected let the public in on this history making announcement. But was the public watching?"

The program ranked in 50th place with the audience that put Elvis Presley first and Ann-Margaret third. I guess Dick will have to shake it if he wants to make it.

"Which man was the villain in 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde?'" That depends on how many psychiatrists you know. Mr. Hyde was the nasty thing that the respectable Dr. Jekyll turned into whenever he drank his magic potion.

"Where does Earl Grant Live?" Like all performers on the nightclub circuit he lives much of the year in hotels and motels, but his home is a 10-room palace in the snazzy Baldwin Hills section of Los Angeles, complete with swimming pool, fountains and wall-to-wall music.

"I hope that Mia Farrow won't just disappear now that she's learned to act." Not a chance. She's even formed her own production company.

"Why don't we see more of Paul Lynde on TV? He's the funniest man on the air." You're already seeing just about as much of him as it's possible to show. He's on "Hollywood Squares," "Kraft Music Hall," "Bewitched," "That's a Life," and the Jonathan Winters Show. Next summer he'll do the Dean Martin Goldiggers series again. He's the most sought-after guest star since Hermione Gingold.

"Did my ears deceive me when I heard Nancy Sinatra introduce Rod McKuen as 'the best selling poet in American letters' on the Kraft Music Hour? My wife thinks she used to hear him on radio, a California radio."
