

COLLEGE REPORT

By ROBERT M. BERSI
Assistant to the President
California State College, Dominguez Hills

Students are demanding many things of their schools and society these days. One persistently heard student cry is that their college coursework be relevant to life. The roots of their discontent reach far back into the history of higher education in America.

At the beginning of the 19th Century American colleges offered only one curriculum for the bachelor of arts degree; the classical, prescribed course of study designed for the purposes of mental discipline and of providing students an awareness of cultural heritage as then understood by faculty members.

But even before the beginning of the 20th Century the colleges had reversed themselves about their purposes. They had established parallel curriculums in engineering, agriculture, forestry, veterinary medicine, business administration, nursing, and pharmacy; and to meet the competition of these curriculums they increasingly added vocational electives in a widening range of subjects as well as pre-law and pre-medicine programs in liberal arts curriculums.

THE PURPOSE of mental discipline had been pushed aside by the psychologists, the purpose of cultural heritage by vocationalism.

The introduction of technological or vocational education did not proceed without vigorous protest; and some present-day educators believe that the bars have been let down too far, that standards have been diluted, and that colleges and universities must drop all their training for the traditional professions. Such is the platform from which Abraham Flexner, Norman Foerster, Hutchins, Albert Jay Nock, and a number of other writers have demanded the reconstruction of American higher education.

Other educators have claimed the dichotomy of vocational and general education is false. They advocate that colleges and universities should provide both, that students can simultaneously take courses not only to increase their occupational efficiency and financial success but also to become informed, public-spirited citizens and wide-ranging, sensitized human beings. To them the most pressing curricular questions have become the amount of general education that students should have and the best methods of coordinating it with vocational preparation.

THE GROUP elective system attempted to answer this question by requiring students to elect a certain number of courses or hours in each division of the curriculum. Its shortcomings, however, prompted two major 20th-Century efforts to strengthen general education: the organization of "overview" courses which developed between 1915 and 1930 and the introduction of new "general education" courses stimulated by the powerful 1945 report of a Harvard faculty committee entitled "General Education in a Free Society."

Under the group elective system students get glimpses of various fields by taking introductory courses in various social science, science, and humanities departments. Most professors, however, have taught the beginning or introductory courses of instructional departments as if all those taking them were going to major in the subject in college and later.

THUS AS Henry Seidel Canby stated it: "The faculty... had one of the great opportunities of educational history, and muffed it... They taught physics for physicists, biology for biologists, history for historians. They were not interested in the American youth who was not going to be a specialist, a professor, but only a leader of industrial, commercial, political America."

Administrator Calls It 'Quits, After 20 Years

J. Rebyrn Hatfield, dean of educational services at Harbor College, will retire from the administrative staff of the college at the end of this semester.

Dean Hatfield is one of the Harbor College '49ers — that is, he has been with the college since it was opened in 1949, a total of twenty years.

His scholastic career began when he started teaching business classes at Washington

High School. He switched from teaching to administration when he was later offered a position as a registrar on the school advisory board. When Harbor College opened in 1949, he joined the college as dean of admissions and guidance, and doubled as Harbor's business division chairman.

He was one of the only three administrators of the college at that time. When the first school president of the college retired, he was made dean of student services.

As dean of admissions and guidance, Dean Hatfield's main duties were to examine and authorize admissions requests of prospective students, and to supervise counseling.

"I helped in the organization of the student body. But then there is the new satisfaction of knowing when you complete a job," he asserts. "I never knew if I were getting through to the students for sure, but when I order a desk, and I can see that it is a desk, I know the job has been done."

A resident of Rolling Hills, Dean Hatfield has been the administrator in charge of Harbor's construction program supervising the construction of eight buildings that have changed the aspect of the college that had 500 students when he entered and 7,000 as he leaves.

Spanish Classes

Now Open Red Cross Winner Honored

Openings still remain in a Spanish class for beginners in the Harbor College summer session July 1 to Aug. 11.

According to the instructor, Julian Enguidanos, of the regular Harbor faculty, the class, Spanish 1, will emphasize conversation and the use of language laboratory facilities. He emphasizes the possibility of rapid advancement in classes running for two and a half hours five days a week rather than the customary class of only one hour. The class starts at 9 a.m. daily.

The class would have special value for elementary school teachers.

Summer session enrollment opens again during daytime hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday, June 23 through 27, and Monday, June 30. Evening registration runs from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, June 23 through 26, as well as Monday, June 30.

Registration is open to high school graduates and persons 18 years of age or older who are residents of the Los Angeles Junior College District. Registration is accomplished in one step with no permit request or entrance tests required.

John Lewis, 20, a student at Harbor College, will be awarded a $400 Red Cross community service award at the Los Angeles Red Cross Chapter annual meeting luncheon to be held at the Cocoanut Grove, Ambassador Hotel, June 19.

For the past three years, scholarships totaling $5,000 each year have been awarded to high school and college students who have shown above average scholarship and have demonstrated an interest in community welfare.

The awards are sponsored by the Los Angeles Red Cross Chapter Office of Red Cross Youth.

A graduate of Gardena High, John is a sociology major and plans on a career in community service. Because of his interest in the community, he was recently appointed student director of community services at the college.

He lives with his family at 18740 Vermont Ave., Gardena.

Many File Duplicates For Tax Relief Check

County Assessor Philip E. Watson today announced that 9,865 duplicate filings were made by Los Angeles County residents claiming the $70 property tax refund, revealed by a computer check of social security numbers on the application forms.

Acting under an agreement with the assessor's office that it would be more economical for the duplication check to be run at the state level, State Controller Houston I. Flournoy found the multiple filings and has transmitted the list of homeowners involved back to the assessor.

The 9,865 duplicate filings were gleaned from the first list of 603,385 refund applications certified to the state, which means more will be uncovered as the final transmission from the county is examined in Sacramento, it was pointed out.

Watson said persons who filed more than one form will be contacted by mail, and will be asked to notify the assessor which property address was their principal place of residence as of March 1, 1968. A new list will then be submitted to the state controller, who will, in turn, mail the $70 refund checks — only one to each homeowner.

The assessor explained that 709 of the duplicates involved property in more than one county, and 1,170 were wrongly listed as duplicates due to the computer misinterpreting some forms whereon the individual had no social security number.

"Subtracting these figures, it leaves us with 7,986 intra-county duplicates in the first 603,385 certified items, or 1.32 per cent, which is a very low figure, in my estimation, considering the confusing language the state board of equalization ordered put on the forms, and misinformation circulated concerning the property tax relief legislation in general," Watson concluded.

FATHER'S DAY GREETING FROM THE NADER FAMILY!

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 3 years, my dad calls me "Miss Crabapple." He says I'm nasty, spoiled, sassy and darn cute. He loves to kiss me, I don't mind it in the morning after he shaves. Mother seems to enjoy it any time. I guess the size of our family is proof enough.

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M KATHY

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 6 years. I'm in the first grade and not exactly setting the world on fire. My dad can't understand why I'm so scrawny. I eat good, play hard, and make Kathy cry all the time. Sometimes my dad makes me cry.

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M FRED

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 8 years. I'm old enough to help dad at the store. I'm vice-president in charge of the "Sweeping Department." My dad says that's not bad for a beginner. He says if I used the same energy sweeping as I use around the house bothering mother... he'll make me "president" in charge of sweeping. WOW!!!

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M PAUL

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 11 years. I also help dad at the store. I was promoted when Paul came in. I'm president in charge of Mopping and Waxing. He says good when "Father's Day" or his "birthday" is near, I wonder why? I sure wish I had enough money to take him out to dinner for Father's Day.

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M GEORGE

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 13 years. I graduate from Grammar School this year and enter St. Mary's Academy. I'm going to learn to type as fast as I can, so I can help DAD at his office. Besides I wanta get out of the house, I'm tired of baby-sitting.

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M CYNTHIA

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 15 years. My dad is teaching me a "New Dance" called the Jitterbug... he sure has a lot of energy. He needs it with our family. He takes those things called "Geritol," he says they give him zip... Mother has zip and she doesn't take them. (Mother isn't as old as dad either.)

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M PAMELA

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 16 years. My dad says I'll never be the "Valedictorian" in my class, heck, I'll be glad just to graduate. I can't seem to convince dad that he needs me more at work than at school. He works too hard and I could share his burden. (Or make them tougher.)

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"

I'M MIKE

MY DAD IS CHUCK NADER

I've been a Nader for 17 years... I graduated from High School this year and plan to enter "Loyola U." My dad wants me to become a lawyer so I can help solve his business problems. I looked "Sensational" in my tux for the Prom, but WOW!! you should have seen my date. (My problem at this age has nothing to do with business.)

"GOD BLESS MY DAD AND YOURS"
