KEYSTONE.

There is no use talking, when you want to have a good time, you can't do better than to attend the Keystone Chamber of Commerce meetings. We have attended many meetings in many places, but no where do they have the happy faculty of making you feel at home to such a marked extent, you get the thrill while reaching to remove your hat, something tells you that you are in the midst of a live bunch of home builders. The smiles and hand clasps ring true, nothing perfunctory in the welcome or entertainment.

An intensive campaign is being waged at present for electric lighting service, this matter has been taken up spasmodically with the public service corporations at various times, but it looks like action is about due.

Travelers along the Harbor boulevard, are about due to see something different in the way of signs. Real signs, the kind several thousand people believe in. These are to be in the form of huge "Keystones" placed along the boulevard.

The people of this bustling, thriving district know when they see a good thing. Proof is found in the fact that they are living in the Keystone midway between the City of the Angels, and the Greatest Growing Salt Water-Harbor in the world.

Ask any man in Keystone where he gets all his confidence and pep, and he won't stutter when he answers: "Friend just take a look with me, say, three or five years in the future—there will be substantial business blocks along this boulevard, where we are standing—these acres worth $2000 now, will be turned into $2000 lots. We will have a thriving city reaching out toward the city on the north, and the harbor on the south, and the space between will be spanned before we realize it."

Are we sitting pretty? I'll say we are. No land owner anywhere ever felt more sure that he had values growing under foot, while he slept, than do we of the famous "Keystone" district. And here is a secret, we never sleep, when there is an opportunity to do something worth while for Keystone.

The county is doing an excellent job of grading and oiling on Carson street, south of the boulevard, and the said county will get no rest until they extend improvements on this important thoroughfare east to the Alameda boulevard.

According to the time allowance of one of the large oil companies, they must begin a well soon in this vicinity. This, together with the fact that the General Petroleum is rushing work on their third large storage tank, lends color to the rumor that a large refinery will soon be started in Keystone.

Drummers, March!

The Sunday school teacher had been telling her class about the benefits of being good. At the end of her discourse, she turned to a bright-eyed little miss and asked: "Where do good little girls go when they die?"

"To heaven," was the prompt reply. "And where do the bad girls go?" "To the depot to see the traveling men come in."

Equine Stars in New Photoplay

Obtaining equine stars that are camera-wise and will act naturally is a difficult task. Benjamin B. Hampton found two extraordinary ones for "When Romance Rides," founded upon Zane Grey's widely read western novel, "Wildfire," released by Goldwyn, which comes to the Torrance theatre on Sunday and Monday, Sept. 10 and 11.

"It required many weeks of the most painstaking work to train the horses," says Mr. Hampton. "Every scene in which the horses appear represents days of worry and sweating on the part of the entire picture organization."

"Of course, the animals were afraid of the glare of the Kleig lights," said Mr. Hampton. "They shied, backed away and were in a high state of nervous excitement because of the lights alone. The click of the camera added to this feeling of nervousness. Many of the scenes were gone through in rehearsal to the satisfaction of everybody concerned, but just as soon as the cameras began to click the horses forgot directors and trainers and watched the lens like an extra doing his first steps before the camera."

ELINOR GLYN, AUTHOR.

Elinor Glyn's novel, "Beyond the Rocks," is Elinor Glyn at her best. It is a classic of erotic fiction, with a moral quality and a true picture of certain phases of life among the social sets of England and the old world. It offers an opportunity for the star, Gloria Swanson, comparable only to the famous British novelist's former picture, "The Great Moment" in which Miss Swanson also starred. It affords excellent roles for a large and brilliant cast and gives Rodolph Valentino, engaged specially for the leading man's role, an opportunity to display his ability as an actor and an ideal lover unsurpassed by any screen player. See this picture at the Torrance Theatre, Thursday and Friday, September 14 and 15.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. VanPatten and children of Lomita, enjoyed the Pageant of Progress in Los Angeles, Sunday.
