

KEYSTONE NOTES

Real estate men in Keystone have been on the jump the last week. Several agents brought out buyers for land to find that it had just sold 30 minutes before.

Timber will be on the ground Saturday for the community hall. Those who are handy with the saw and hammer can make themselves useful Sunday on the lot.

Mr. and Mrs. Nahmens sold an acre of their land for $4000 Wednesday. We'll see a new Lincoln or Rolls-Royce in Keystone before long.

Last Monday evening about 70 of the Keystone folks enjoyed a visit to the Torrance glass factory. A few had never been in a glass plant before and knew nothing of the steps glass had to go through.

START SERIES FREE STREET DANCES HERE

Owing to the fact that the Ladies' Auxiliary of the American Legion are giving a dance on Saturday evening, January 27, the free street dance announced in the Herald as to be given by the Bartlett Sweet shop the same evening has been postponed until the following Monday night, January 29.

Permission to hold the street dance was given Mr. Bartlett by the city council under the impression that it conflicted with no other social event.

El Prado will be brilliantly lighted for the occasion and the best four-piece orchestra obtainable secured for the evening.

In addition to the delightful time the hundreds of dancers will have they will be given an opportunity to secure five handsome prizes Mr. Bartlett is donating to his patrons.

The first prize will be a five-pound box of McDonald's chocolates, the second prize a one-pound fancy work basket filled with delicious chocolates.

Usual Cause of Chick Mortality

If there is any one thing more than another which is the cause of failure in the poultry business, it is doubtless the great loss of chicks. Incubation is comparatively simple to raising chicks after they are hatched.

Causes are numerous, some are plainly identifiable by anyone, but causes least suspected are, undoubtedly the most serious. Probably a large majority of chick deaths will by most people, be credited or debited to "diarrhea," "constipation" or simply "found dead."

Many more chicks die from over-feeding than under-feeding. Never feed at any time, a little at a time and frequent meals are the best.

Baby chicks must be kept comfortable—it is utterly impossible for the digestive organs of a chick to act in a normal manner unless the temperature is even and at the proper point.

Overheated normal digestion immediately stops, or given point, the temperature drops below a given point, the food lies in the digestive tract and soon ferments unnaturally.

As a result, the chicks come away from the brooder in the morning very thin and with their crops puffed up from gases of the fermenting food which they consumed the afternoon before.

Foods that are ground and mixed with water or milk to make a mash are likely to be eaten too rapidly and too plentifully for the good of young chicks.

They also object to the chick's gizzards not tend to develop the chick's protein content, or having a great excess of carbohydrates and fats, are injudicious; any great excess in either direction puts too much work on the chick's digestive organs and causes derangement.
