SPOTLIGHTS ON SPORT

by JACK KEENE

"Massey reminds me of Ad Wolgast. His style is the same." This compliment, paid to young Al Massey, promising lightweight fighter of Muskegon, Mich., by a veteran fight fan, is well meant.

Wolgast became the popular idol that he was through his marvelous ability to "take it" when the going seemed uphill in a battle.

But today Wolgast is in the land of "long ago." He is fighting over again, in his clouded brain, the great battles of "those days" when he took everything. A mental wreck, he is waiting the final count of the Great Referee.

If Massey's style includes the willingness to take two punches to give one, it is to be hoped someone changes it for him—for his sake.

The stock of the Brooklyn Dodgers has gone up considerably since Milton joined the team from the Cardinals. Laugh that one off.

While the withdrawal of Sarazen and then St. James from the Kentucky Derby is unfortunate, the absence of these two winning thoroughbreds will not affect interest in the blue ribbon event.

Carl Mays is probably a self-satisfied gentleman these days as he gazes at the National league pitching records and finds himself among the regular hurlers.

Every American league club permitted Mays to pass out of the younger circuit without a murmur. There were two or three reasons for their unanimous action.

Mays announced, when allowed to depart without so much as a farewell salute, that he would show the American league bosses he wasn't done. He has made good, apparently.

The Cleveland Indians now appear to be the fixed team of the American league race. At the start of the season they seemed to have the main thing they lacked last year—capable pitching.

Uhle's arm went lame. Covey got away to a bad start—even now seems about done—and the youngsters failed to pitch the effective ball asked of them.

Then, on top of these misfortunes, Tris Speaker, mainspring of the team, contracted a cold that finally forced him to remain away from the game for several days.

In the meanwhile the Browns and Tigers are cutting each other's throats and the Yanks are breezing along in the lead.
