OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY OF TORRANCE

WHO'S WHO IN THE NEWS

THE United States figures quite prominently in the career of Count Carl Moltke, minister of foreign affairs in the first Labor cabinet in Denmark. He spent several years at Washington as envoy of his government, and he married an American wife, Cornelia Van Rensselaer Thayer, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer of Boston. Just in the same way that in Great Britain several peers of the realm were found willing to throw in their lot with her first Labor cabinet and to array themselves under the banner of James Ramsay MacDonald, so has the new Socialist prime minister of Denmark, M. Stauning, succeeded in securing the co-operation of Count Moltke, a member of the old Danish aristocracy.

Count Moltke has for the last twelve years been filling the extremely difficult job of Danish envoy at Berlin. Matters were rendered all the more complicated for Count Moltke at Berlin through the fact that there was throughout the war a pronounced sympathy and constant and intimate intercourse between the Socialists of Germany and those of Denmark, the latter of whom are now in office, and that the crown princess of Germany was the sister of Queen Alexandrine of Denmark.

One of the most trying periods of the count's life at Berlin was when the Danish government declined to consider Germany's offers of purchase of her West Indian islands and sold them to the United States instead. Possession of a naval base at St. Thomas would have been of almost priceless value to Germany during the great war. Then, too, the fact that the countess was an American and that she had sent her only boy, Charles, now 16 years of age, to her American relatives at Boston for safe keeping during the war, rather than to subject him to the privations at Berlin in the matter of food due to the rigors of the allied blockade, was not precisely calculated to facilitate matters for Count Moltke.

Count Carl Moltke is by no means the only member of his house to have married an American woman. Count Adam Moltke, who was for a considerable time secretary of the Danish legation at Washington, married there, in 1896, Louise Eugenie Bonaparte, sister of Jerome Bonaparte, now of New York, and niece of the late Charles Bonaparte, who was a member of the Roosevelt administration. They divide their time between Paris and their extensive Fiona Island estates in Denmark. Then there is Capt. Leon Moltke, who married Miss Edith Marion Garner of New York and who also makes his home in Paris. Both Leon and Adam Moltke are sons of that wonderful old Count Leon Moltke who during some thirty-five years was Danish envoy at Paris, where he played a notable role throughout the reign of Napoleon III. He was married to Countess Seebach, the lovely daughter of the Saxon envoy to the court of the Tuileries, and granddaughter of that Count Nesselrode who was chancellor of the empire of Russia throughout the reign of Czar Nicholas I.

TALKS BY THOSE WHO THINK

THE most vital aspect of radio at present is the effect it will have on the fall presidential campaign when the candidates will have an opportunity to get in touch with voters all over the country through the medium of the nation's broadcasting stations." So says

RADIO POLITICAL FACTOR
James G. Harbord, retired general in the United States army and now president of the Radio Corporation of America. Says Harbord: "The chief difficulty in every national campaign has been to obtain personal contact with the people. The fact that candidates are described and written up in newspapers and magazines is not enough for the average voter. He wants to have a look at them himself, to try to get at the sincerity and motives that are behind each of them. This desire radio will help solve."

"Why have presidential candidates in times past taken trips across the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Minnesota to Louisiana? Is it because of the dozen or perhaps two dozen set speeches that they make in the largest cities? Not any more so, or probably not as much so, as it is for the opportunity that the trips give the candidates to make speeches from the back platforms of their trains at every inland hamlet the railroad runs through. The personal glimpse that the voters get of the candidates in those short stops of five minutes or even less leave a greater impression than any amount of writing will."

Personal Touch Valuable

"That personal touch is what men in public life always have sought, and they can establish that contact now in all parts of the country by radio. No man in the world ever has been listened to by any such numbers as listened to President Coolidge in his two talks over radio."

"Radio gives people an insight into the personality of the candidates. It is strange, isn't it, how a man's choice of words or his manner of speaking will lead to a vivid impression of his character? The information that radio will give people this year to enable them to choose between candidates is more vital and far-reaching to the voters of the country than anything else the campaign promises to hold. Radio will elect the next President."

GOOD NIGHT!

For hours they had been together on her front porch. The moon cast its tender gleam down on the young and handsome couple, who sat strangely far apart. He sighed. She sighed. Finally:

"I wish I had money, dear," he said. "I'd travel." Impulsively, she slipped her hand into his; then, rising swiftly, she spent into the house. Aghast, he looked at his hand. In his palm lay a nickel.

ADVICE ONLY

There's a certain Hollywood doctor who is not above prescribing for some patients, who only imagine they are sick, some remedy he imagines they'd like to take, hence when a pretty movie widow came to him with a vague complaint, he was right on the job.

"My dear," he murmured, "you are slightly morbid. You should look about you, and marry again." "Why, doctor," beamed the little woman, "is—is this a proposal?" "My dear lady," protested the doc-

Service Here With a Smile

By THE MYSTERIOUS COWBOY

IF IT BEARS THIS MARK OF PURITY = R_x = THEY SELL IT

Every resident of Torrance knows the Torrance Pharmacy situated as it is, in the center of things, at the corner of Cabrillo and Carson.

Fathers and mothers resort to this drug store. They know that the remedies put up by the registered pharmacists of the Torrance Pharmacy are absolutely reliable and would give the relief sought if it were humanly possible. The reputation of the store has flourished from the beginning. It is a store that is the friend of the whole family. Here is where father, hurrying to the roaring city, stops to get his smoke or his paper. Mother bought her new hairbrush here; the children go there for the goodies they get from counter and fountain. It is a place of much service, besides having an excellent prescription department. Here one can procure Kodaks, have any kind of work done, find a large line of drug sundries, stationery, confectionery, the A. D. S. and Nyal lines, and many other things that are required in our every day life.

A. W. Malone and his brother, J. F. Malone, are the proprietors of this well conducted pharmacy. The former has lived here six years, and the latter three years. They are both, native sons, having been born at Azusa, where their parents settled when Azusa had but six families. Both are public-spirited fellows and take a keen interest in the advancement of Torrance. Their clientele has grown to big proportions since the store was first opened to the public, and the trade is constantly growing, thanks to the admirable manner in which they conduct the business.

Why is the dollar mark like this?

—because it was originally a combination of the initials U and S (United States). Due to haste in drawing, the curve of the U gradually dropped away. The low price of
