Mae Murray To Be Seen in Big Ibanez Picture "Circe the Enchantress" Next Week

WHAT'S ON AT LOMITA THEATRE Friday and Saturday—D. W. Griffith's "America." Sunday and Monday—Johnnie Walker in "The Spirit of the U. S. A." Mack Sennett Comedy.

"Circe the Enchantress," an original story for the screen written especially for Mae Murray by Vicente Blasco Ibanez and produced by Tiffany Productions under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, will be the attraction at the Lomita theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The product of the combined efforts of these three famous people has been one of the most widely discussed films of the season. Mae Murray has one of the most colorful roles of her screen career in "Circe the Enchantress." Ibanez has based his story on the mythical Circe, who could turn men into beasts with one wave of her hand. Miss Murray is a modern Circe and is given an opportunity to display her real dramatic talents.

Besides Miss Murray the cast for "Circe the Enchantress" includes James Kirkwood, William Haines, Thomas Ricketts, Charles Gerard, Lillian Langdon and Gene Cameron.

Much interest has been aroused by the offerings of the Wood Players at the Lomita theatre every Wednesday evening. This company presents the latest dramatic successes in a very capable manner, high-grade vaudeville being interspersed between the acts. This is in addition to the regular picture program, making an evening of exceptional entertainment.
